Rails Request I.C.C. to Raise Rates at Once; Fear Failures

Unprecedented Motion Urges Increase Pending Study.

Drastic Decline In Traffic Cited

Immediate Relief Needed, Roads Assert April 1 Too Late.

U. S. Economic Front.

The Nation's railroads, pinched between declining revenues and mounting costs and taxes, urged the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant their proposed 15 per cent freight rate increase immediately.

Myron C. Taylor, retiring head of United States Steel, wrote the New York Railroad Club that railroad relief is imperative.

The National Association of Manufacturers closed its annual convention with a call for sweeping revision of the Wagner labor relations act.

The Conference of Southern Governors, in sympathy with the railroads' distress, asked the I. C. C. to abandon an investigation of Southern freight-rate differentials.

Rails Urge Increase.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Contending that many carriers face bankruptcy because of a situation which has become critical within the last month, the railroads of the country yesterday petitioned the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant authority for an immediate application of the proposed 15 per cent increase in freight rates and the boost in Eastern passenger coach rates from 2 to 2½ cents a mile.

The plea of the railroads was contained in an unprecedented motion filed with the commission, requesting that body to indicate an early convenient time when the question thus propounded might be heard orally by the full commission. A meeting of the full commission was called for this morning.

The commission is now engaged in holding hearings on the railroads' plea for the 15 per cent freight rate and passenger increases. Although the I. C. C. has expedited the procedure in this case, a determination of the questions involved would not be possible, under the present schedule, before next March. Thus the railroads would not be in a position to derive benefit from whatever increases are allowed until April at the earliest.

Due to "an extraordinary decline in traffic during the past few weeks" and to increased operating expenses already outlined to the commission, the railroads asserted they cannot wait until April 1 for relief but must have it by January 1 or shortly thereafter if sharply curtailed service and bankruptcies in many cases are to be averted.

Consequently they requested the I. C. C. for authority to make the proposed rates effective on five days' notice to shippers and the public pending the outcome of the commission's consideration of the proposal for permanent increases. Unless the railroads are given immediate relief irreparable injury will be done to them, their motion contended.

Meanwhile, the Administration, it was authoritatively learned, has become anxious over the gravity of the railroad situation. President Roosevelt and R. F. C. Chairman Jesse Jones this week have held several conferences regarding that problem. They have been seriously

Laura Curtis Plans to Obtain Second Divorce From Lawyer

Underwood & Underwood.
MRS. JAMES F. CURTIS. In gardening attire.

For the second time in her colorful career, Mrs. Laura M. Curtis Washington and New York society, sports and business woman, will file suit for divorce from James Freeman Curtis, New York lawyer, it was learned here yesterday.

Blonde and magnetic, with a husky voice and an engaging personality, Mrs. Curtis has had a number of occupations in the past few years, but is known now chiefly in connection with the 1925 F Street Club, which draws members from the Capital's smartest circles.

At the time of her marriage to Curtis, a quarter of a century ago, she was considered one of the most beautiful girls in Washington. She made her debut here as one of the "big six," bowing to society in the 1909-1910 season. The daughter of the former Governor of Minnesota and Mrs. William Merriam, she moved with her parents to the Capital when her father was appointed director of the census.

Got Divorce in 1924.

After her marriage to Curtis who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury during the Taft Administration, she divided her time between Washington and New York, and in obth cities distinguished herself as a popular hostess and a woman with keen philanthropic interests.

In April, 1924, word came from Paris that Mrs. Curtis had obtained a divorce and the custody of the children on a charge of desertion. Less than 13 months later she and Curtis were remarried in Washington.

From that time on Mr. and Mrs. Curtis spent a good part of their time in Washington. In 1929, she opened a social club in the house where she formerly had lived.

She and Curtis have two sons and two daughters. The eldest, James F. Curtis, jr., better known as "Curtis Curtis," is now in business in New York; Laura E. is Mrs. George H. ("Pete") Bostwick, wife of the polo player; young Frazier is in Harvard Law School, and Pauline is attending school in Catonsville, Md.

Within the past few years, Mrs. Curtis has made the 1925 F Street Club a success, has managed a dress shop and has organized the Curtis Service Bureau, guaranteed "to supply motor cars at short notice, butlers, valets, maids, chauffeurs, chaperones, or anything else a hostess might need."

She also has been active in Community Chest work, the United Hospital Drive and other philanthropic ventures.

At one point she purchased a string of ponies from Saratoga and planned to turn her racing stables at Aiken, S. C., into a money-making venture. She gave up this project in 1929.

5-Man Board On Wage Act Is Eliminated

Single Administrator Is Proposed Instead by House Group.

Democrats Weld Forces Against Onslaught of Republicans.

By Robert C. Albright.

The House Labor Committee yesterday scuttled proposals for a five-man board to administer pending wage-hour legislation, and substituted an amendment for a single powerful administrator with an independent status in the Labor Department.

The substitute amendment, approved, 9 to 6, by the committee, ignored recent American Federation of Labor recommendations for fixed statutory 40-hour week and 40-cents-an-hour provisions, enforced by the Justice Department.

Action was taken at a twilight executive session of the committee after adjournment of the House. It fulfilled a pledge formerly made to the House by Chairman Mary T. Norton that she would seek committee action on a one-man administrator within the Labor Department.

Secret Meeting Held.

The committee amendment climaxed a day of behind-the-scenes developments that included a secret meeting of wage and hour bill sponsors addressed in a co-operative spirit by the Southern House leaders, Speaker William H. Bankhead and Sam Rayburn, majority leader.

Although no binding agreement was reached at the wage-hour caucus the upshot was an understanding among some members that group action would be concentrated on support of the labor committee's bill and amendments, permitting wage differentials between the North and the South, as opposed to inflexible statutory wage provisions.

Speaker Bankhead read the President's wage-hour message, stressing recommendations for flexibility. Majority Leader Rayburn and Representative Patrick Boland, of Pennsylvania, House whip, appealed to the 100 members present to remain constantly on the floor after the bill comes up under discharge rules Monday, to assure maximum attendance and to block obstructionist tactics.

After last night's special meeting of the House Labor Committee, Chairman Norton announced the single administrator proposal would be offered as a committee amendment to the measure already reported favorably last session by the group. She will consult House parliamentarians on whether to offer the plan as a single amendment, or

Greenbelt Asks Referendum on Banning of Pets

Taxes, wages and hours and crop control may be the most agitated questions beneath the Capitol dome, but 12 miles away in Greenbelt the political issue of the hour is dogs.

Indignation at the clause in Greenbelt leases which excludes pets from the model homes reached its climax yesterday when Roy S. Braden, town manager, received a petition demanding a referendum on the possession of dogs and cats within the boundaries of the Maryland Utopia. One hundred and eleven citizens signed the manifesto.

Awaiting the referendum and possible relaxation of the edict against dogs, Greenbelt residents are lavishing their affection and substantial quantities of food on a mongrel that strayed yesterday into Suburban Resettlement Project (Md.) No. 6.

Avoiding any entanglement in the canine controversy, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday paid a surprise visit to Greenbelt. The First Lady made a thorough inspection of the school and community center and stopped to chat in several of the homes.

Industry Calls For Revision of U. S. Labor Law

Demand Follows Fahy Plea to Observe Letter of Wagner Act.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 9.—The National Association of Manufacturers closed its annual convention today with a call for sweeping revision of the Wagner labor relations act.

The last of three days' sessions was entitled "labor day," and was attended by 3,000 industrialists.

The convention adopted a final resolution attacking the Black-Connery wage-and-hour bill, which it was declared, would "create a vast Federal bureaucracy."

The demand for revision of labor laws followed a closed session at which Charles W. Fahy, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, vigorously opposed revision of the Wagner act and called upon the manufacturers to observe it to the letter of the law.

WPA to Add 350,000 Idle To Pay Roll

$23,000,000-a-Month Increase Ordered in Spending.

Half-Billion Is Sought by Ellenbogen for Agency.

By the Associated Press.

The Government ordered a $23,000,000-a-month increase in WPA spending yesterday to cope with mounting unemployment.

Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, announced that work relief projects would be expanded within the next few weeks to provide 350,000 additional jobs.

His announcement increased speculation as to whether President Roosevelt's announced goal of a balanced budget in the next fiscal year could be achieved in view of the business recession.

Half a Billion Sought.

Hopkins said he was not thinking at this time of asking a deficiency appropriation to supplement the $1,275,000,000 the President had budgeted for WPA this fiscal year, which ends next June 30.

The $23,000,000-a-month increase will come out of the $1,275,000,000. Up to now WPA has been spending at the rate of $100,000,000 a month, so that at the end of November, $500,000,000 had been spent, and $775,000,000 was left. Thus it was indicated WPA could spend at the increased rate for a time without exceeding the sum the President budgeted for work relief.

But Representative Ellenbogen (Democrat), Pennsylvania, urged that Congress appropriate half a billion more for the work relief agency, declaring:

"I'm convinced that, regardless of business developments, the situation is such that we must have at least a half billion more."

Protests CCC Budget Cut.

Word that President Roosevelt still intended to balance the budget came, however, from Chairman Johnson (Democrat), Oklahoma, of a Democratic House group which protested to the Chief Executive against a proposed $75,000,000 cut in next year's outlays for the Civilian Conservation Corps.

"The President said that the CCC camps had done excellent work," Johnson told reporters, "but he said there was a demand for balancing the budget and that he intended to do it."

The House committee advised the President that, while it opposed the proposed elimination of 300 camps in the next fiscal year, it was not opposed to economies effected within the camps without impairing their efficiency. An economy the group said it wouldn't tsand for, however, was cutting ration expense.

Hopkins Off to Clinic.

Hopkins told reporters he felt "bum," disclosing that he would leave tonight for Rochester, Minn., to undergo a physical examination at the Mayo Clinic.

He said current WPA reports showed 1,575,000 were on the work-relief rolls, compared with 1,519,740 in the week ended November 27. WPA rolls have climbed since October 2, when they reached a low point of 1,450,101.

Japanese Shells Rip Nanking; U.S. Embassy Periled

American, Wife Disappear Oddly At Moscow Hotel

By the United Press.

Moscow, Dec. 9.—Two Americans, Donald L. Robinson, New York writer connected with the Soviet State Publishing House, and his pretty blonde wife, have disappeared mysteriously, it was revealed tonight.

The United States Embassy was understood to be making inquiries.

Robinson vanished several days ago. His wife, a plump woman about 30, told newspapermen he had left their hotel room ostensibly to go to a hospital to be treated for fever.

Today she, too, was missing.

She said she was informed, when her husband failed to reappear, that he had contracted pneumonia and been placed in an iron lung.

A Russian-speaking man was moved immediately into their vacated room. He denied knowing anything about the Robinsons, but 20 minutes after he moved in porters removed the mattress, bedstead, blankets and rug from the room.

There was nothing to indicate the Robinsons were under arrest.

Haiti President Asks Indemnity For 7,000 Dead

Also Seeks Punishment of Dominican Republic Soldiers.

Copyright 1937, by the United Press.

Port-au-Prince, Haiti, Dec. 9.—Reparations to families of the "nearly 7,000 victims" and punishment of the guilty persons alone can appease the anger of the Haitian people over the recent "mass murder" of Haitians by Dominican Republic soldiers and police, President Stenio Vincent said tonight.

The murders, which began October 9, caused a "stupor in this country which has not yet disappeared," the President said.

As soon as complete reports of the affair were received, representations were made to the government of President Rafael L. Trujillo. The Dominican Republic preferred, however, "to reject our protest under the mask of diplomacy," the President said.

Cold Fatal to 77; 20-Degree Low Is Sighted for D. C.

Striking deep into the normally winter-proof South, the Nation's cold wave last night has caused directly and indirectly an estimated 77 deaths throughout the country as it threatened the citrus crop in northern Florida.

In Washington the forecaster said the mercury would sink to 20 degrees before dawn, and that today and tomorrow would be fair and cold. Yesterday's high was 36 at 5 p. m. A low of 22 was recorded at 7 a. m.

Three children died in coasting accidents in western Pennsylvania.

The coldest point in North America was Bottle Ford, Saskatchewan, with 40 below. The Nation's "hot spot" was Miami, Fla., where the mercury soared to 78.

Nanking (Friday), Dec. 10, 7:30 a. m. (By Radio).—Japanese aircraft and artillery subjected this ancient walled Chinese capital to a terrific bombardment today.

Bombs were falling in the heart of the city not far from the United States Embassy, which had been evacuated.

There was a continuous roar from Chinese antiaircraft batteries, some of which were on the Yangtze River front near the American gunboat Panay, on which most Americans were in refuge.

Planes Over U. S. Embassy.

From the United Press correspondent's position on the river front it could not be determined, whether the attacking Japanese columns had breached the city walls.

Planes could be seen, however, flying directly over the United States Embassy compound.

The Japanese war fliers were going into shrieking power dives northeast of the embassy and dropping the biggest bombs which they have loosed on this city during all the scores of raids to which they have subjected it.

No Safety Zone.

Bombs appeared to be falling in or near the embassy area in the northern part of the city, where an international committee attempted in vain to establish a safety zone for an estimated 100,000 Chinese civilians who refused to leave their homes when the mechanized Japanese legions swept up to the city walls.

It seemed possible that the fate of the capital might be decided during the day.

Defense Situation "Critical."

The new attack, which preceded expiration of a Japanese ultimatum demanding surrender of the capital before noon today, followed 24 hours of sporadic activity, including a series of air raids on Thursday.

At that time the Chinese were holding all the walled city and most of the waterfront, outside.

Chinese commanders were confident that they could hold out for "some time longer" but admitted that the situation was "critical" and refused to reiterate their prediction of yesterday that effective resistance could be continued for a week.

Fighting in Streets.

[Meanwhile, radio reports from Wuhu said Japanese forces had broken through the city's defenses and were engaging the Chinese defenders in bloody street fighting, the Associated Press reported.

Man Whipped Pistol to His Head When Asked About Tregedy, Police Say.

A Washington mine employe was in the custody of Montgomery County police at Rockville last night after he allegedly thrust a pistol against his head while being questioned in connection with the death of a fellow-miner at the bottom of a gold mine shaft in Maryland yesterday.

The dead man was Charles Haynes, 35, of Potomac, Md., whose body was found in a pool of water the bottom of the shaft. The pool in the Maryland Mining Co. near Potomac.

An autopsy, performed last night by Dr. W. F. Murphy on the order of State's Attorney James H. Pugh, disclosed that Haynes had drowned.

There were no marks on the body, Murphy said.

According to Policeman M. D. Dayhoff, the man being questioned whipped out a pistol and moved it toward his head in the company office while Dayhoff was asking about the death.

Haynes, mine workers told authorities, was sent down a rope ladder leading to the bottom of the shaft to turn on the pumps preparatory to quitting work for the day.

Haynes leaves a wife and three children.

Reform School For Girls Here Faces Abolition

Collins Says D. C. Sub-Committee Will Consider Step at Hearings.

By James D. Secrest.

Abolition of the National Training School for Girls will be considered at hearings on the 1939 District budget, Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on appropriations, disclosed yesterday.

Collins, who made a hurried visit to the school Wednesday, suggested that the inmates, who frequently cause such disturbances that police are called, might be transferred to the District Workhouse at Lorton.

The property, he said, might then be turned over to the Industrial Home School for Boys, now located on Wisconsin avenue.

As the House sub-committee prepared to open hearings on the District budget next Monday, it was learned that the Budget Bureau had cut approximately $1,900,000 from the Commissioners' estimates and had submitted a budget for 1939 amounting to about $47,800,000.

Chairman Collins declined to discuss the Budget Bureau's proposals, however, and stated that he had not seen the figures and did not expect to examine them before Sunday.

'Barbarous' Criminal Trials For Insane Here Denounced

A scathing denunciation of the District's "barbarous" lunacy law, which treats as a criminal the person who comes before the court for commitment to St. Elizabeths Hospital, was delivered yesterday by Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of the federal institution.

An immediate repercussion of his plea for reform was a unanimous vote by the Council of Social Agencies health committee, which he addressed, to request the United States Public Health Service to include this and other mental hygiene problems in its coming survey of the Capital's public health establishment.

Dr. Robert Olesen, an assistant surgeon general and director of the survey, indicated he is in sympathy with the request, and that, with the approval of Surgeon General Thomas Parran, it will be acted upon favorably.

Dr. Overholser quoted from an article in the American Journal of Psychiatry which brands the District commitment system as barbarious and he deplored its lack of provision for voluntary admissions to St. Elizabeths.

"A sick man is brought into court—a criminal court room—and accused of being a lunatic," the nationally known psychiatrist said. "A jury sits in the box and the trial begins.

"Mothers and fathers, sons and daughters must testify in the presence of the 'accused.' The trial is held in open court, where all may come to see and hear. A situation such as this exists hardly anywhere else in this country. It is grossly unfair."

The argument that this mode of procedure is necessary to prevent "railroading" of people into institutions is a delusion, Dr. Overholser said. In virtually every case, he added, investigation of charges of

Young Couple With 3 Children Needs but $52 For Mortgage and Medicine for Grandmother

GRANDMOTHER CAME TO LIVE with the X family about a year ago, when Grandfather X died. Her insurance money helped for a few months. It has dribbled away. Grandmother is 55 years old—10 years too young for an old-age pension.

Mr. X is 28. His wife is 26. They have three children, aged 4, 6 and 8. Mr. X is a carpenter and heretofore has been able to make a "go" of it.

They live together in the old family home. The mortgage must be paid, $15 a month. This, plus taxes, however, is comparatively cheap in Washington.

But there is no money for food—or to meet the mortgage. The Public Assistance Division cannot help, for Mr. X is considered employable.

Grandmother has a chronic cardiac condition and rarely leaves the house. She needs $2 a week for medicine. The children love her and so do Mr. and Mrs. X. If things get worse—if worse can get worse—she may become "another mouth to feed."

The experience of receiving charity is new for this family. Mr. X did not know how to make the request. After he had made it, there was nothing that could be done for him or his children.

The agency to which he applied has so much faith in his ability that it believed Mr. X can get work within the next two months. He now gets a day or two occasionally.

If the grandmother could have a second-hand stove, which can be purchased for $6, and be assured her medicine for two months, and the mortgage could be paid for two months—the agency believes that this family could be kept together and set on its feet again.

The total amount needed to meet these three worst needs of the family is $52.

No. 9—The X Family.

The Post today presents the ninth case among the 25 neediest families of the District's unemployed employables, for whom its Christmas fund will be collected. There is no relief fund for them. They are deserving cases, investigated by an agency of the Council of Social Agencies. Their need is measured in terms of money. Unless they are helped now, the amount they need later will be much larger.

Contributions received yesterday to the Christmas fund totaled $224.50. (List on page 9.) This brings the total to date to $994.75.

Send your donation to The Washington Post Christmas Fund, or leave it in the box on The Post's first floor. Any amount will help, however small.

Crop Bill Vote Today as House Dooms Changes

2 Amendments Opposed by Administration Are Rejected.

Driving for final farm bill action in the House, the Administration leadership yesterday narrowly averted inroads on compulsory corn quota provisions, then moved to restore wheat control features today to their full former force.

At the other end of the Capitol, Senate leaders battled rising opposition to their more drastic bill, and barely salvaged strong tobacco provisions, with two votes to spare.

After nearly two weeks of debate and floor revision—the longest time spent on any House legislation in 14 years—that chamber reached the last section of the bill and prepared for final roll call votes today.

Senate Delay Feared.

But in the Senate, which has been debating farm control for a fortnight, a mass of proposed amendments and demands for immediate business relief measures endangered prospects of farm bill action until next week.

Chairman Marvin Jones, in the House, maintained his less compulsory farm bill intact against major amendment raids after one close call. That came on a proposal by Representative Harry M. Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, to exempt the corn crop from marketing quotas and penalty enforcement. It was defeated, 71 to 75, on a standing vote, and 99 to 93 on a teller vote.

Then Jones brought reading of the bill to the final section and virtual completion, preparatory to driving down the last lap today.

Wheat, alone among the five major commodities, has been exempted by amendment from compulsory marketing quotas. Today Jones will demand a roll call on the wheat modification, in the hope of restoring both marketing quotas and penalty taxes to enforce them.

The House Agriculture Committee will attempt to salvage one other loss via the roll call route. It will seek reconsideration of the amendment by Representative Gerald J. Boileau (Progressive), of Wisconsin, barring the use of retired acreage for pasturage or cultivation of other market crops.

Meanwhile, the Senate, by a 34 to 36 vote, defeated an attempt by Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, to protect the smaller tobacco farmers (averaging up to 15,000 pounds production), from sharp quota cuts.

Change Is Defeated.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, took the floor against the change, contending it would wreck the bill's tobacco section. Last minute arrival of two Senators to cast their votes against the amendment prevented a tie vote. Only the day before the Senate had escaped modification of corn quota provisions by a one-vote margin on an amendment by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), Montana.

The cotton section of the Senate bill remained intact, as the chamber passed to consideration of the tobacco section. Two tobacco amendments were successful. One by Senator Logan (Democrat), of Kentucky, would place tobacco under the ever-normal granary plan, and another by Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, would limit reduction of tobacco acreage to 20 per cent of the 1937 acreage.

Senator Smith, of South Carolina, Agriculture Committee chairman, announced he would propose immediate Government purchase of 6,000,000 bales of the record cotton crop in an effort to raise prices to 12 cents.

Working for Washington

CHARLES F. FOSTER.

By Christine Sadler.

When Charles F. Foster moved to Hillcrest 12 years ago there were only "six to eight homes on the hill." Today there are more than 400.

This is but one indication of the rapid expansion under way in that section of the District "across the river," extending from Good Hope road to Thirty-sixth street and taking in Pennsylvania avenue on the north, Southern avenue on the south.

Any other proof of its growth can be had upon a visit to Hillcrest. Streets are being opened up and paved, and nice homes are under rapid construction. Foster, who is president of the Hillcrest Citizens Association, believes the area is developing "as fast, if not faster than any other suburban area in the District."

The development is a bit belated, he pointed out, due to some attempted real estate profiteering back in the days of Cleveland. The President searched the District for a place to build a residence. He liked the looks of Hillcrest, which is only three miles from the Capitol, is 300 feet higher than the main part of Washington, and "between 5 and 10 degrees cooler." According to the story, Cleveland negotiated for the purchase of a site—only to have the price run up when the dealer learned his identity. The deal did not go through.

"If he had moved here we would have been a developed area, but our streets probably would have been too narrow by now and our area commercialized," Foster said.

As it is, the present Hillcrest citizens live in an area restricted to one-family homes—and have hopes of keeping it restricted to residential growth.

The objectives of the association Foster lists as follows:

1. Construction of the Oxon Run sewer, which "will be to the advantage of everybody on this side of the river."

2. Construction of sidewalks, curbs, and gutters. One of the most urgent needs for these, in the opinion of Foster, is found in the fact that trees will not be planted along streets until the curbs and gutters are in. "And we believe in trees," he declares.

3. Paved streets. This, again, is a "because" proposition. "We are not so particular about getting some of the streets paved, but we have to have the paving before we can get the curbs and gutters," Foster says.

4. Underground wires and modern street lights.

5. Better bus service and more buses.

Foster is serving his second term as president of the Hillcrest group, of which he was a charter member.

Born in Baltimore, Foster moved to the District 20 years ago. He worked for a while at the Navy Yard and then entered the public school system as a shopkeeper. When he became interested in school work he decided to prepare himself for a teaching job. He is now a high school teacher in Anacostia. For several years previous to his elevation to that post he taught junior high school subjects.

Mrs. Foster, also, is an enthusiastic civic worker and often accompanies her husband to meetings of the Federation of Citizens' Associations, to which he is a delegate. They have four sons, one of whom is married.

Kennedy Task To Cement U.S., British Trade

War Debt Also Problem of Man Expected to Be New Envoy.

The expected appointment of Joseph P. Kennedy, the Irish candy-butcher from South Boston who became a millionaire and a top-flight Government official, to the Court of St. James, will be aimed at cementing Anglo-American trade and financial interests, it was learned yesterday.

President Roosevelt is expected to name Kennedy, now chairman of the Maritime Commission, to the post as American Ambassador to Great Britain, shortly, concurrent with the acceptance of the forthcoming resignation of Robert W. Bingham, Louisville publisher, who is in failing health.

While the White House, Kennedy himself, and the State Department preserved rigid silence on the nomination, friends of the former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission predicted his appointment within a few weeks.

The shift in the diplomatic set-up of the Government follows closely on the resignation of Ambassador to Germany William E. Dodd, whose post Assistant Secretary of State Hugh R. Wilson, former Minister to Switzerland, is expected to take.

Kennedy, it is believed will be the first American Catholic appointed to the position. His efforts are expected to be directed primarily at a business-like deal for the United States in the proposed reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain, at a possible settlement of the war debts situation, and at international monetary stabilization.

Without previous foreign diplomatic service, Kennedy is regarded as one of the shrewdest businessmen in the country today. Sometimes referred to as "the New Deal's tame capitalist," Kennedy has served the Administration first in adjusting Wall Street and the Nation to the securities and exchange act, and recently in taking over America's "sick industry," the Government merchant marine, whose course he is now plotting.

By his own efforts the owner of a $50,000,000 fortune, the former bank president, Harvard baseball star, shipbuilder, investment banker, movie magnate and corporation reorganizer has now prepared himself for his biggest task. Widely and well known to the British business world, he is no stranger to British businessmen, as he heads a firm which imports Haig & Haig Scotch whisky from England.

Snell Predicts Special Session of Congress Will Be 'Unmitigated Flop,' With Few Results.

BERTRAND H. SNELL, of New York, Republican leader of the House to his friends and the "Potsdam Cheese Baron" to his foes, celebrated his sixty-seventh birthday yesterday by biting down hard on his cigar and cracking down hard on the Administration.

Snell flatly predicted the present special session would be "an unmitigated flop," and added:

"If any laws at all are passed this session, they will be unsatisfactory to everyone. In the old days, though, we never took orders from anyone. We made up our own minds."

CHAIRMAN HATTON W. SUMNERS of the House Judiciary Committee announced yesterday that the committee will consider recommending a constitutional amendment to permit Federal taxation of salaries of State and municipal employes, and of interest, now tax-exempt, on Federal, State and municipal securities.

His committee will also start hearings soon, he said, on the Ludlow constitutional amendment providing for national referenda on war.

"HEAT HAS BEEN APPLIED" to Congress by lobbyists for road material salesmen, said Representative McFarlane (Democrat), Texas, yesterday, "since the President proposed a reduction in Federal aid to highways."

McFarlane said that these interests and some State highway departments had always considered the Government as "Santa Claus," and added that they had the support of groups which heretofore have loudly called for budget-balancing.

AT HEARINGS on the maritime program, Edgar F. Luckenbach, president of the Luckenbach steamship line, suggested that Congress bar subsidized vessels from this country's intercoastal trade, as Governments aid to ships in this service would discriminate against non-subsidized lines.

The white-haired ship owner urged that intercoastal lines operating through the Panama Canal be permitted to retain their canal tolls, to be deposited in a fund for the exclusive use of a vessel-replacement program.

JOSH W. LEE, the boyish-looking Senator from Oklahoma, advised his colleagues yesterday to listen to the warning of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of their party:

"If we are told from Washington when to sow and when to reap we shall soon want bread."

Lee was debating the farm bill, which he opposes as too compulsory.

SENATOR ROBERT REYNOLDS, of North Carolina, noting the heavy attendance in the Senate chamber yesterday, suggested that Senators work harder when elections near, saying:

"I think I have never seen so many members in the Senate as we have at the present time, which shows that they know there is an election coming on and want the people to see they are at work."

"Is it not possible that the Senators have gathered to hear the Senator from North Carolina speak?" inquired Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington.

"I thank the Senator for asking that question, which I suggested that he ask me," Reynolds replied amid a roar of laughter.

"But the Senators know I am not talking to them," he continued. "I am talking to the people of North Carolina.

"And that should not be strange to the Senators, because they know that civilization began in North Carolina."

Soft Coal Prices Held Excessive For Consumer

U. S. Commission Is Asked to Delay Action Until Hearing Is Held.

By the Associated Press.

Witnesses who said they spoke for consumers found fault yesterday with the new, Government-fixed prices for soft coal.

They testified at a conference called by the consumers' counsel of the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

Meantime the smokeless producers district board (southern West Virginia) worked on a petition to the commission asking changes in the price schedule as it affects operators in that district.

The new prices, fixed last week, are to go into effect December 16. Price-fixing was provided for by the second Guffey act, put through Congress last year at the request of the United Mine Workers and about half the industry.

Alex Pisciota, deputy commissioner of markets in New York City, led the long list of consumer representatives who objected to the prices as fixed.

Calling the prices excessive and often discriminatory, he proposed a resolution asking the commission to delay putting them into effect until consumers had been given a hearing. The resolution was referred to a committee.

John Carson, the board's consumers' counsel, said every consumer, large or small, would be given an opportunity to tell the commission of any injustice worked by the price schedule.

Consumers, he said, could wreck the Guffey act through propaganda. He urged them, however, to consider what he said was the only alternative—nationalization of the industry.

Meanwhile a committee of anthracite miners and operators conferred with representatives of the Pennsylvania anthracite commission yesterday about the possibility of price-fixing legislation for the hard coal industry. The conference reached no conclusions.

This wheel and twisted remnants of chassis are all that is left of a truck after it was struck by a B. & O. limited at College Park yesterday. The driver was killed instantly and a helper is not expected to live after the accident which tossed heavy concrete blocks for yards in every direction.

1 Killed, 1 Hurt As B. & O. Train Smashes Truck

Flying Bricks Shatter Car Windows, Hit Homes at College Park.

One man was killed and another was injured critically at the College Park, Md., station yesterday when a B. and O. through train struck and demolished a 2-ton truck. Heavy cinder blocks and cement from the truck smashed parked cars and damaged homes as far as 50 yards from the crossing.

John W. Durham, 29, colored, of the 700 block Park Road northwest, the truck driver, was decapitated. His helper, Vanderbilt Harrison, 38, colored, of 1256 New Jersey avenue northwest, is in Casualty hospital not expected to live.

Although the crossing is guarded by lights and a bell, Durham drove directly into the Washington-bound train's path, Edgar Talbott, who witnessed the accident, said. Talbott reported he yelled and waved at the truck as it drove onto the tracks but that it continued on its way.

Windows in a car owned by Theodore R. Richards were smashed by flying bricks, as was the front porch of Mrs. Dana Reynolds' home. Another block crashed through a window of the nearby railway station, narrowly missing Agent R. G. Keys.

The train—No. 35 from New York—was operated by E. R. Miller, a veteran engineer, police said. It was delayed 45 minutes by the collision. Acting Coroner George S. Phillips issued a certificae of accidental death.

Mail Order Romance Deprecated by Judge

Huntsville, Ala., Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Courtship and marriages "by mail" were frowned upon today by Federal Judge John McDuffey as he imposed suspended sentences of two years each on three of four women charged with using the mails to defraud in an alleged "marriage-by-mail" racket.

Judge McDuffey declared: "Any man who is fool enough to send money to a woman who answers his inquiries in a marriage proposal is not fit to be a husband." Trial of a fourth defendant was postponed indefinitely because she has been committed to an institution for the insane.

Police Seek D. C. Girl Missing From Home

Cummings Accepts Letter of Resignation; Pine May Succeed Him.

Confirming his desire to retire from the post of United States Attorney for the District, Col. Leslie C. Garnett yesterday revealed that he had personally handed his resignation, effective December 31, to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and had received an acceptance.

Neither the letter of resignation nor the acknowledging letter of acceptance was made public.

While no statement as to a successor was forthcoming, it is known that Col. Garnett has been grooming his chief assistant, David A. Pine, to step into his shoes. Pine has been engaged in the practice of law here for many years and has handled much of the Government's civil litigation, including that involving the ill-fated N. R. A.

Should Pine step up into the job his chief is vacating, it may mean a general realignment of the staff of assistant United States Attorneys, which numbers 30 men.

4 D.C. Houses Raided in Hunt For Gambler

Equipment Seized Without Arrests; Police Will Continue Search.

The raids, led by Sergt. George Deyoe, failed to locate the underworld figure, but a large quantity of gambling equipment was seized.

No arrests were made, however.

Breaking in on the first gambling house located in the 1400 block of I street, the police continued the raids when the "big shot" was not present.

Three raids followed, at the gambling establishments in the 1300 block of I street; the 1100 block of Thirteenth street and in the 900 block of G place. All were in the northwest section.

The police, it was reported, have a warrant for the arrest of the gambler and will continue the raids until he is cornered.

Wedding License Wins Him Liberty On Drunk Charge

A marriage license yesterday was the ticket to freedom for a prisoner at Police Court.

George W. Barber, colored, pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness before Judge Edward Curran. When the court asked him what he had to say before being sentenced, Barber replied that he planned to get married on Monday, "if you will let me go." If not, he added, "I'll just have to do the best I can."

Barber produced the marriage license. He was released.

Barnet Nover Warns Of World in Anarchy

Barnet Nover, Post editorial writer, warned listeners at the Jewish Community Center weekly institute Wednesday that the world is in danger not only of losing present and pre-war standards but of being subjected to international anarchy.

Pointing out that the world is drifting into war, he declared that the more democratic nations such as the United States, Great Britain and France are becoming too peaceful in their outlook. Today, he said, conditions exist where peace is not peace and war is not war.

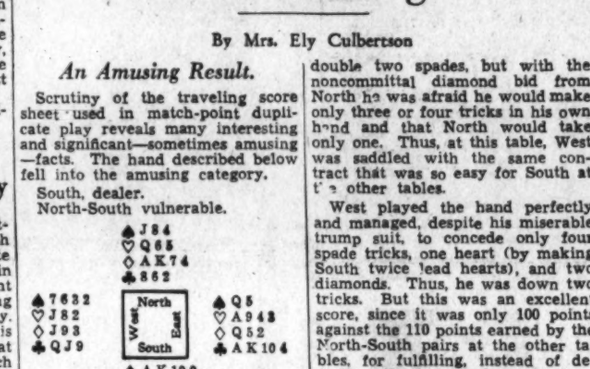
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

An Amusing Result.

Scrutiny of the traveling score sheet used in match-point duplicate play reveals many interesting and significant—sometimes amusing—facts. The hand described below fell into the amusing category.

South, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



At almost all tables South was declarer at a two spade contract, which was invariably fulfilled. The bidding at these tables went:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	Pass	1 ♣
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

These declarers had little difficulty in winning eight tricks, losing only three clubs, one heart, and one diamond. The only care necessary was to pass a diamond, in order eventually to throw a low heart on dummy's fourth diamond. At one table the bidding took quite a different course, as follows:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 N T	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass

Apparently South, at this table, thought his hand was too good to pass, and, therefore, started with the much-abused club bid. As it happened he could have got a good result if he had had the nerve to double two spades, but with the noncommittal diamond bid from North he was afraid he would make only three or four tricks in his own hand and that North would take only one. Thus, at this table, West was saddled with the same contract that was so easy for South at the other tables.

West played the hand perfectly and managed, despite his miserable trump suit, to concede only four spade tricks, one heart (by making South twice lead hearts), and two diamonds. Thus, he was down two tricks. But this was an excellent score, since it was only 100 points against the 110 points earned by the North-South pairs at the other tables, for fulfilling, instead of defeating, the two spade contract.

Rhode Island Citizens Accept Trolley Raise

The Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association Wednesday went on record as opposing reopening of the Capital Transit Co. rate case before the Public Utilities Commission and declared it acecpted the rate increase granted the company.

Plans for a community Christmas tree, to be erected jointly with the Brookland-Woodridge Business Men's Association at Rhode Island and South Dakota avenues, were completed at the meeting. The association indorsed the Health Department's request for two additional employes to inspect barber shops and beauty parlors.

Tenement Fire Kills 7 Children And 2 Mothers

20 Others Barely Escape Blaze in Ramshackle 2-Story Building.

By the Associated Press.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. 9.—Two mothers and seven children died screaming early today when fire engulfed a drab, crowded tenement building.

Twenty other persons barely escaped from the ramshackle, two-story frame structure. Flames and smoke blocked the only exit from the second floor—a narrow, boxed in stairway—and many were forced to leap 18 feet to the frozen ground. Several were slightly hurt.

The dead: Mrs. McKinley Conatser, 35, and three of her children, Luther, 12; Virginia, 6, and Vallee, 4. Mrs. Cora Tate, 56; her son, Eugene Tate, 17, and her three grandsons, R. L. Melton, 12; Junior Melton, 6, and James Earl Melton, 9.

McKinley Conatser, 34, a newspaper vender, jumped to safety with his 5-month-old baby in his arms.

"I screamed for my wife to follow me," Conatser said. "She grabbed for the children, but she couldn't get to the window. I heard her scream, then flames leaped over her."

'Neurotics' Scored At Marriage Clinic

Classifying as "neurotics looking for an excuse for their own failures" those who recommend any modification of conventional moral codes, Dr. Paul Popenoe, director of the Family Relations Institute, of Los Angeles, discussed "New Morality" at the final session Wednesday of a marriage clinic he has been conducting here under auspices of the committee on volunteer service of the Council of Social Agencies.

"Civilizations have always declined in direct proportion to the decline in rigid moral standards," warned Dr. Popenoe. "Strictly monogamous relationships between men and women, with a considerable period of delay between the time of physical maturity and the time of marriage, promote the highest development of a cultural society—it is one of the chief distinctions between savagery and civilization."

Dr. Popenoe outlined as the five essential elements to a successful marriage: The mating impulse, sexually colored comradeship, comradeship based on nonsexual or intellectual interests, mutual economic interests and mutual interests in the children."

Dr. Heiser Advocates Alfalfa Diet to Chefs

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Dr. Victor G. Heiser, the world-wandering physician, suggested today to American chefs the "palatable" possibilities of alfalfa. African gold miners were fed alfalfa to supply necessary calcium, he said.

Industry Calls For Revision of U. S. Labor Law

Demand Follows Fahy Plea to Observe Letter of Wagner Act.

tion, asserted labor strifes had cost America $5,000,000,000 in 1937, "the worst and most costly period of labor turmoil in our history," and declared the Government's attitude was "one of the worst stumbling blocks to a rational get-together."

The association later adopted a report by its board of directors, which said:

"Government should protect the right to engage in lawful strikes, by lawful means, but its primary obligation is protection of the right to work."

The report urged that both Federal and State governments prohibit not only unions but business corporations from making political contributions.

Closed Shop Condemned.

The report condemned the closed shop and checkoff and asserted compulsory Government arbitration of labor disputes was "contrary to American principles."

It urged that "all laws against violence, intimidation and coercion in the field of labor relations should be vigorously enforced."

Holding out for increased freedom from Government interference in settlement of labor-capital disputes, the platform enumerated various conditions under which employers would not be penalized for failure to deal with organizations.

These included sit-downs, general strikes, strikes to compel establishment of the check-off system for compulsory collection of union dues or the closed shop and strikes "accompanied by continuous and systematic acts of violence and intimidation."

Presented as Model.

It proposed the same principle for strikes in "violation of employment agreements, including agreements to accept an arbitration award."

Presented as a model for a "sound" employment relations policy, the statement was submitted by the board of directors and adopted by the full convention.

"Where employes desire to bargain or negotiate collectively," it set forth, "either directly or through voluntarily chosen representatives, the form of employe organization should be left entirely to the employes and the employers, but should not be directed or controlled by any governmental agency.

"The function of Government, as declared by President Roosevelt in settling the automobile strike in March, 1934, should be only that of assuring that employes shall not be subject to coercion from any source.

"The national labor relations act and similar State acts should be amended accordingly.

"The right of collective bargaining by employes upon a basis of full equality with the employer is now established and enforced by law. There remains no justification for the closed shop or strikes to obtain it."

Colby M. Chester, the organization's chairman, addressing the final dinner session of the convention, was asked if the program was fair, social, constructive and liberal. He answered:

"We believe so. Furthermore, if it is not, we are prepared to make it so."

"Has Government or labor a better program?"

Walter J. Kohler, chairman of the Kohler Co., and former Governor of Wisconsin, led off the day's speakers by attributing to labor and the Government's attitude in labor disputes a share of the business recession.

"I conducted an ORCHESTRA LEADER to a perfect symphony in whiskey"

HE SAID

"Judging by what you say, Four Roses must be a regular symphony of whiskey virtues. I'd like to know why it is."

I SAID

"Take several of the world's premier orchestra leaders, each talented in some special direction—and imagine them all combined into one maestro. What would you have?"

HE SAID

"A man who could coax symphonies out of a hill-billy band!"

I SAID

"Follow the same line of reasoning, and you'll understand why Four Roses has just about everything you want in a whiskey.

"For Four Roses is several great straight whiskies (and only straight whiskies!) combined. Moreover, each of these straight whiskies is outstanding for some special quality—aroma, body, flavor, or smoothness.

"Skillfully blended together—as they are in Four Roses—these whiskies are merged into one liquor far greater than any of them could be alone."

House Committee Votes One Administrator to Pilot Act.

to break it up into a series to be distributed throughout the bill.

She emphasized that the man who would be charged with administration of the proposed wage-hour law would be entirely independent of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, although he would be attached to the Labor Department, and would have full use of its facilities.

The new set-up, if approved, apparently would give this official powers virtually as broad in administering the act as those exercised by former NRA Administrator Hugh Johnson over the New Deal recovery code establishment.

Would Pick Committees.

The administrator would be appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate. The administrator, in turn, would appoint wage-hour committees for the various industries. He would name three employers and three employes to represent each industry from names submitted by employes and employers. These six would pick three more members to represent consumer interests. One of these public members is to be elected chairman.

Wage-hour recommendations for each industry (the bill permits differentials within the range of wages as high as 40 cents an hour and a work week as short as 40 hours), would be made to the administrator by these industrial committees, Mrs. Norton said.

This official would not be compelled to accept them, but could resubmit them to the committee with recommended changes. But if the administrator and the committee twice disagreed, the administrator would have authority to name a new committee.

Clinching the administrator's independent status, the amendment specifies that his decisions shall not be subjected to review by any other official in the executive departments.

Denies "Domination."

Asked why the committee had not acted on the American Federation of Labor's latest substitute, providing rigid wage and hour standards frozen in the law, Mrs. Norton said the approved amendment "formerly" had the support of the Federation of Labor.

"Apparently, other people than women maintain the right to change their minds," she said.

"Whatever gave you the impression that we are under the thumb of anybody?" she asked the reporter. "This is a legislative committee. We are not under the domination of anyone."

Proposals in Bill.

The federation's proposals, allowing for no wage and hours differentials, are embodied in a bill already introduced by Representative John F. Dockweiler (Democrat), California. Numerous other bills, with the same intent, previously had been introduced in the House and Senate. Dockweiler is expected to move to call up labor's bill shortly after the committee's wage-hour measure has been brought before the House.

Although leaders attending yesterday's caucus of wage-hour bill supporters were reluctant to discuss its significance, members said it was part of a movement to reach harmonious ground between North and South on the bill, and to avert sectional hostilities which might wreck the measure.

Bankhead Risked Defeat.

Flexible differentials under the House committee bill, as opposed to hard and fast wage standards, favored by labor members, was the compromise sought. How many Southern votes this would win was highly doubtful, but the leadership indicated their intention to give full support to such a plan.

Southern opposition to wage-hour legislation, particularly to inflexible standards, has been a chief obstacle since the bill first came before the Senate. Speaker Bankhead was said to have informed the caucus that he risked re-election defeat in his stand for the committee measure, even though it permitted lower wage differentials in the South.

Leaders addressing the caucus are understood to have warned against possible attempted combination of House Republicans with some Northern laborites against Southern differentials in the early votes, only to vote with Southern members in the end against the bill. The caucus audience was exhorted to "stand by the Administration."

Bacon Seeks Inquiry.

Republican opposition to the bill crystallized yesterday in a resolution by Representative Robert L. Bacon (Republican), of New York, to postpone wage-hour action pending an investigation by a Federal commission of inquiry into the whole problem of labor standards in industry.

"Our national experience with NRA, AAA, housing, social security, the Wagner act and the Guffey coal act have demonstrated the dangers of hasty legislation based on inadequate factual material," Bacon said.

Agreement of the House Labor Committee on the amendment for a single administrator followed wide-open disagreement over powers of the official at a morning meeting of the group. The amendment would displace the Senate bill's provision for a five-man administrative board, which has been criticized vigorously by all labor factions.

tions carried in the current District supply act. Close to $500,000 of this increase, it is understood, was given to the highway department.

Even this sum, however, will not absorb all of the extra revenue which is expected to accrue to the special highway fund by reason of the motor vehicle weight tax that went into effect this year. This tax will raise $1,500,000, it is estimated, above the gasoline levy returns.

Details Not Known.

Whether the Budget Bureau intends for the District government to accumulate a surplus in the highway fund, as it has in the water fund, is not known.

The effect of the Budget Bureau's slash on the District's new tax bill likewise is problematical at this time. While the Commissioners' estimated early in the fall that $5,000,000 in new or renewed taxes would be needed to finance a $49,700,000 budget, it is not yet certain that the $1,900,000 reduction necessarily cuts the revenue needs to the same amount.

District officials explained that until the details of the budget are known, or even until the House sub-committee on appropriations makes its report, the revenue that must be raised in new taxes will not be known.

Another uncertainty arises from the lack of knowledge over just how much money the present business privilege tax will produce this year. Estimates on its return have varied from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000 and more.

Two Taxes Will Expire.

Both the business privilege tax and the 25-cent increase in the realty and personal property tax, which added $3,200,000 to local revenue, are due to expire at the end of the present fiscal year.

If Congress follows the Budget Bureau's lead and holds 1939 appropriations close to $48,000,000, however, it is likely that realty tax can be cut. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen has suggested $1.60 as "a fair rate."

The special District tax committee is scheduled to meet today in what may be its final session before its recommendations are submitted to the Commissioners.

Meanwhile, members of the Kennedy sub-committee on District revenue appear to be just as sharply divided on the tax issue as they were last year.

2 Members Lean to Sales Tax.

At least two members are leaning toward the sales tax, which the sub-committee rejected last year, but even they are doubtful that Congress would pass it. Three other members favor the income tax but are likewise skeptical of its chance of getting through the House, which last session wouldn't even consider it.

All agree that the field at present seems to be narrowed to the business privilege levy, though they admit that it should be rewritten so as to eliminate inequities.

Collins and his colleagues on the District sub-committee yesterday inspected several street and bridge projects proposed in the 1939 budget. Among them were the K street viaduct, which the chairman believes should be started next year, and the underpasses at Dupont and Thomas circles.

Today other District institutions will be visited by the sub-committee.

Freddie Bartholomew Estate in Aunt's Hands

Los Angeles, Dec. 9 (AP).—Miss Myllicent Bartholomew, aunt and guardian of Freddie Bartholomew, won complete control today over the 13-year-old film star's interests and affairs.

"I would like my aunt to have full control of the estate," he testified in precise English at a hearing on the demand of his parents that a bank continue as the guardian. "My reason is very aptly illustrated by the fact," he continued, "that while my aunt had charge of my affairs once before for a little over a year, she saved $20,000, but since the other parties have taken over the estate, it has depleted very rapidly."

German Says He Strangled American Girl

Confesses Killing 4 Men Too; Dancer's Body Under Porch Near Paris.

By the Associated Press.

St. Cloud, France, Dec. 9.—The body of Jean De Koven, a strangler's cord still cutting deep into her neck, was dug up by police today after a German fugitive confessed the pretty American dancer was the first of five victims he killed to get "money to eat."

Eugene Weidmann, a German runaway from military service, led police to an isolated villa where he lived four months with the 22-year-old Brooklyn (N. Y.) girl's body buried in the clay under the front porch. Two men were buried in the cellar.

"De Koven? From behind I strangled her—she fell like a rag doll," police quoted Weidmann as saying.

Aides Reported Quizzed.

[In Paris, the United Press cabled, secret police were reported holding two accomplices used as "lures" by Weidmann to entice the five victims to his lonely villa. Weidmann, a good-looking German of 29, boasted his deep-set eyes lured the American girl to her brutal death. "My magnificent eyes fascinated her," the modern "Bluebeard" said, according to the United Press.

[Key men of the Surete at midnight supposedly were questioning the two alleged accomplices. One was said to be a buxom blonde woman, and the other a "sheikish" man with lacquered hair and suave manners, the United Press reported.]

Police said that the curly-haired German confessed to strangling Miss De Koven, who disappeared July 25, and shooting the four men in the back of the head. The murders netted Weidmann about $1,000.

Weidmann was captured at his villa last night. A gun fight ended when a wounded policeman struck him down with the hammer Weidmann had used to stun one of his victims.

Georges Berry, investigating magistrate at Versailles, said Weidmann told police he took the girl to his villa, kept her overnight and strangled her the next day after they had shared a bottle of milk.

Other Bodies Found.

Weidmann, Berry declared, said both he and the girl were hungry and the only food in the house was the milk.

Her fully clothed body was encased in red clay when it was dug up from beneath the porch of Villa La Voulzie set in a half acre of wooded ground on an isolated hill. Her hat was still on her head. Buried with her was a white leather pocketbook, half open, from which a fountain pen, pencil and some letters protruded.

In the basement police found the bodies of Fritz Frommer, German Jew who once was Weidmann's cellmate in a German prison, and Raymond Lesobre, the real estate agent for the villa. Frommer was killed November 22, Lesobre November 27.

The first of the men to be slain was a taxi driver, Joseph Coffey, on Setptember 7. Roger Leblond, a broker, was killed October 16.

"Miss Jean de Koven came of her own free will to my house in St. Cloud. We gossiped and smoked cigarettes together—then her handbag tempted me," Weidmann wrote.

Police traced Weidmann through a maze of aliases from his connection with Lesobre. Weidmann had made an appointment with the real estate agent at the villa, police said, and then shot Lesobre because he did not have the money for the rent.

Japanese Open Bombardment, Rock Nanking

Nanking defenses which lie 90 miles to the east.

[No word was received of the fate of foreigners still in the city. Last reports said there were 24 Americans still there.

[Foreign sources said Japanese columns had taken Chinkiang, capital of Kiangsu Province, 40 miles east of Nanking, in house-to-house fighting.—Editor's note.]

Members of the American Embassy staff left the gunboat Panay, on which most of Nanking's American colony is in refuge, went inside the walled city this morning and saw the Japanese air raids from a vantage point atop the bomb-proof dugout in the embassy grounds.

Early today Chinese announced reinforcements had arrived augmenting 11 divisions inside and adjacent to the city walls and added the Chinese were attacking the Japanese lines of communications between Shanghai and Nanking. Some Japanese columns had had to halt their advance to await the arrival of munitions.

By the Associated Press.

Despite the storm hovering over Nanking, a handful of Americans and other foreigners remained there. The United States gunboat Panay stood by on the Yangtze, maintaining communications with the outside world. Other gunboats of the United States Yangtze patrol lay off Wuhu and Kiukiang to aid Americans if need arose.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, who left Nanking by airplane with his wife and W. H. Donald, his Australian adviser, was said to have gone far into the interior to Hengshan, Chinese air base 80 miles south of Changsha, in Hunan Province. Previously he was reported to have gone to Nanchang, capital of Kiangsi Province.

China Determined to Carry On War With Japan, Dr. Hu Shih, Aide to Chiang, Tells Newswomen

"Tell the American people we are determined to carry on this war, not only through the winter but for a long period to come."

Dr. Hu Shih, diplomatic adviser to the Chinese government, made public this message, received from Gen. Chiang Kai-shek November 22, in his address at the luncheon of the Newspaper Women's Club at the Admiral yesterday—his first statement to the press since his arrival in America.

"Whether or not Nanking falls, my government and my people are determined to carry on," he declared. "The fall of Nanking would only mean carrying the war into the interior; giving up a capital does not mean a determination to yield."

Hu a Pacifist at Heart.

There are two major issues involved in the war, said Dr. Hu—the clash of Chinese nationalism with the imperialistic continental expansion of Japan, and the issue between international anarchy and world order.

Dr. Hu, proclaiming himself a pacifist at heart and not a propagandist—"for the sympathy is already all on our side"—went from the situation in China to the threat to world peace which it involved. He pointed to the incidents which drew this country into the World War and asserted that, if the present conflict in China continues one or two years, there is every probability of Russia and Great Britain being drawn into it and even of this country's becoming involved. He made no plea for assistance and asserted that China expected none.

If mediation is possible, it will be acceptable to China only through the Nine-Power Conference at Brussels or one or two powers with a mandate as representatives of the Nine-Power Conference and under the Nine-Power Treaty, he declared.

He characterized as Japanese propaganda, the reports that subordinate generals would betray Gen. Chiang.

Obstructed Nanking Effort.

Dr. Hu pointed out that Japan had obstructed at every turn, China's efforts to develop a stable, national government at Nanking. Great in territory and weak in government, China has been a stake of diplomacy and long the object of Japan's territorial ambitions on the continent, he said.

Although the Nine-Power Treaty guaranteed to China her sovereignty, independence and integrity, and the signatories pledged themselves never to take advantage of the conditions there for their own ends, Japan has imposed six wars on the country in the past seven years, said Dr. Hu.

Dr. Hu was a graduate student at Columbia University at the time of the World War. "The world looked to President Wilson for a new world order," he said. "I was here and caught the spirit which has made me a pacifist and an internationalist at heart."

100 Attend Luncheon.

Mrs. Eugene Meyer, who introduced him yesterday, was a student at the university at the same time and first met him there. She related in her introduction how one of his professors had prophesied then that he would become a leader in world affairs. He is now considered China's foremost statesman.

The luncheon of the Newspaper Women's Club, its first this season, was attended by nearly 100 members and guests including managing editors and members of the editorial staffs of the Washington papers, heads of press associations and foreign correspondents. Ned Brunson Harris, the president, presided. Others at the head table included Zaung Teh Ing, Counselor of the Chinese Embassy; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, director of the Mint, and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General.

Criminal Trial For D. C. Insane Is Denounced

Bill Provides Reform.

In the discussion of Dr. Overholser's address, Dr. Roger S. Cohen, chairman of the District Medical Society's subcommittee on mental health, brought out that the reforms urged by the speaker are provided for in a Senate bill introduced last January.

The measure would do away with the present trial procedure, creating a commission of doctors and one lawyer which would thoroughly and privately investigate every commitment case and make recommendations to District Court, before which lunacy hearings are now tried.

Approved by the District Medical Society and the Federation of Citizens Associations, the bill also provides for voluntary admissions, such cases receiving the privilege of leaving the institution at any time after giving three days notice. This system, as well as the commission plan, was reported to be in wide use throughout the country.

In his first public address locally since his recent appointment as head of the largest Federal hospital for mental cases, Dr. Overholser said that the District's ratio of commitments—582 per 100,000 population—is more than 50 per cent above that for the Nation as a whole. The fact that any Capital city attracts a large number of abnormal characters may help explain this unusually great proportion, he said.

1 Out of 22 Admitted.

In his statistical picture, the speaker pointed out that 450,000, or one-half of the grand total, hospital beds in the United States are devoted to mental cases. Although it is impossible to determine how many psychotic persons there are or whether their number is increasing, it is estimated that 1 individual in each 22 will spend more or less time in an institution during his life.

The only figures available on the incidence of insanity are based upon hospital admissions, Dr. Overholser said. In some jurisdictions, he asserted, sufferers are incarcerated in jails because of overcrowding in institutions.

Due in great measure to the initiative of the late Dr. William A. White, its former superintendent, St. Elizabeths Hospital is making good progress in treatment, prevention, research and teaching, Dr. Overholser told the council health committee.

With more than 5,800 patients, the institution is overcrowded, but the equipment and personnel are of the first order, he declared. Especially encouraging results are being obtained with the "insulin-shock" treatment of dementia praecox, he said.

Prohibition Made Drinkers.

The increase in number of admissions due to alcoholism was blamed on prohibition.

"National prohibition just made more people drink," Dr. Overholser said. "The percentage of alcoholic admissions is high but I think it can be reduced."

Along preventive lines, he recommended that parents and school teachers deal carefully and sympathetically with children subject to behavior problems.

The speaker also pointed out that more and more physicians are beginning to realize psychiatry is not an isolated specialty, that every physical disability has its psychological implications and many mental cases result from injuries or sickness affecting other parts of the body.

Dr. Overholser's address was heard by Assistant Surgeon General Olesen, Health Officer George C. Ruhland, Welfare Director Elwood Street and representatives of practically all of the District's public and private health agencies. Willard C. Smith, committee chairman, presided over the meeting, which was held at the Y. W. C. A.'s E street branch.

Labor Leaders Charge Hague With Terrorism

12 Congressmen Hear C.I.O. Counsel Describe Police Tactics in N. J.

By the Associated Press.

Twelve representatives heard yesterday protests of union leaders against what they termed "denial of civil liberties by Mayor Frank Hague" in Jersey City, N. J., as they considered a visit to the city for first-hand study.

Morris L. Ernst, New York counsel for organizers of the Committee for Industrial Organization, who were arrested in Jersey City, told the representatives a story of "terrorism by police."

Several representatives asked if Hague would prevent a meeting of Congressmen in Jersey City? "I can't say what he would do, but if you will come we can find out," Ernst replied.

Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, said, "as a Southern Congressman, I say there is need for a law to preserve the civil liberties of the people from attacks by such men as Hague. The last laugh is best, and he is not going to have it."

Ernst told the group that Hague "was itching for a fight."

The representatives were among the 26 Congressmen who signed a letter to Hague asking an explanation of police interference with labor organizers. Hague replied that everything was under control in his city.

Treasury Weighs Mellon Tax Appeal

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Morgenthau said yesterday the Treasury had not decided whether to appeal a decision of the United States Board of Tax Appeals exonerating the late Andrew W. Mellon of income tax fraud charges.

He declined to make any other comment on the case. The board reduced the Government's claim against Mellon from more than $3,000,000 to about $700,000.

Mutilation Victim Is Held in Similar Attack on Another

A Washington father of two children was held on a fugitive warrant here last night in connection with an attempted mutilation of Frank Robbins, 29, of Boone, N. C., in a Richmond (Va.) hotel room.

Giving his name as Romney Harvill, 30, he was arrested at his home in the 1200 block of B street southeast, by Detective Sergeant Richard Cox to whom he denied connection with the mutilation attempt, saying that Robbins, found on the hotel room floor, weak from loss of blood, by a bell boy the morning of December 2, had threatened to kill himself and that he, frightened, had fled.

Two years ago Harvill was brought from his home to Casualty Hospital suffering from a crude mutilation operation. He told police of being forced at gun point into a car by two colored men, who drove him across the District line into Maryland, lashed him with tire chains and performed the operation.

Robbins refused to talk when questioned at the hospital by Detechive Sergeants G. Z. Parker and James Inman, of the Richmond police, the Associated Press reported last night. Hotel officials told police Robbins and two other men registered at the hotel early in the morning. Neither of the men was in the room when he was found.

Memorial Hospital in Richmond last night told the Associated Press that Robbins' condition was "good."

Seminary Student Is Suicide in Car

Atlanta, Dec. 9 (AP).—Coroner Paul Donehoo said a letter impounded by postal inspectors today indicated Lynn Nutting, 16-year-old seminary student, committed suicide last night while riding in an automobile with Alfred F. Green, jr., 17.

The girl died from a bullet wound shortly before midnight. Green told police the girl found a pistol in a pocket of the car and remarked, "I would like to fire a pistol." He said the gun was discharged a moment later and the girl slumped in her seat. Donehoo refused to disclose contents of the note, other than that it was a "suicide farewell."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

William A. Albaugh presents Uday Shan-Kar and his Hindu Ballet in the National Theater Friday afternoon. Program: "Snanum," "Indra," "Hunter's Tragedy," "Astra Puja," "Vilasa," "Mohini," "Kartikeyya," "Harvest Dance," "Tandava Nrityu."

Once again was the ancient choreographic art of India brought to Washington for the visual delectation of spectators who perforce understand only a part of the symbolic gestures, and once again were heard compositions in the Hindu ragas which are incomprehensible to Western ears. But such is the artistry of Uday Shan-Kar and his admirably trained dancers, and such is the charm of exotic music that partial understanding sufficed for enjoyment.

Although the program had few changes to differentiate it from the one presented last season, the novelty of the Oriental style in interpretative dance removed any feeling of staleness from the performance. One is aware of no weariness in observing the flowing grace of movement, the plasticity of the posturing bodies and the variety of physical intonations in the flexure of arms and hands. Foreign though the idiom is, this subtle eloquence of gesture has a fascination akin to that of an unknown tongue spoken with beauty of phrase and accent.

The compositions of Vihhnudass Shirali, skillfully played by himself and his associate musicians, are not to be judged by our standards even though we are versed in the intricacies of polytonality and the 12-tone system.

Gov. Aiken 'Thumbs Down' On Professors

They and Millionaires Never Won Elections, Says Vermonter.

By the Associated Press.

Gov. George D. Aiken, a weather-beaten Vermonter, stepped into the middle of the national political scene yesterday and gave the Republican Party this tip:

"Millionaires and college professors never won elections."

The Governor, who drew Nation-wide attention earlier this week by advocating a "purge" of the Republican leadership, arrived to oppose the Administration's regional planning bill.

He talked with reporters and later conferred with John D. M. Hamilton, national chairman.

Seeking Advice on Plan.

Hamilton has been seeking advice from Republican Congressional leaders and others about the selection of a committee of 100 to formulate a new party program. The National Republican Executive Committee is to meet in St. Louis Monday to establish the program group.

Aiken said he had no advice to offer because he knew so few politicians. That included former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois who has been mentioned most frequently for the committee chairmanship.

The Vermonter declared he had little enthusiasm for the program committee idea, anyway, and saw little value in an off-year national convention, such as Herbert Hoover and others had suggested.

Accepts Welfare Aims.

He said he accepted "in general" the welfare aims of the Roosevelt Administration, but wasn't advocating that the Republican Party should move to the left. The Nation, he said, may be getting a little "too welfare conscious."

Asked about prospects for an anti-New Deal coalition, Aiken said he had met and liked many Southern Democrats and found their viewpoints apparently coincided with his own. He added that a coalition move would be all right if it could be worked out.

Balks at Bid for Advice.

Senate Republican Leader McNary, of Oregon, and other party leaders in Congress turned down a request from Hamilton for advice on the membership of the program committee.

"I don't think," McNary wrote the national chairman, "it is good policy or politics for me or any other member of the Congress to make any suggestions . . . Selections made in this fashion would inspire the charge that the delegates were hand-picked and the committee packed."

Wheat to Name Third Jurist in Criminal Court

Heavy Congestion Noted by Chief Justice in District Dockets.

Seeking to accelerate the trial of cases in the heavily congested District Court criminal dockets, Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat will appoint a third jurist to try such cases at the beginning of the January term, it was announced yesterday.

Justices Jesse C. Adkins and Joseph W. Cox are presiding over criminal trials, but because of a number of lengthy cases have been unable to keep abreast of the docket.

It was understood Daniel W. O'Donoghue, now sitting as motions judge, would be given the task of helping clear up the congestion.

THE FEDERAL DIARY

By Scott Hart.

Statistics.

Comes the monthly statistics from Civil Service Commission, showing decreases here and a-field, but nothing to make one start calling it "the thinning ranks" . . . During October, there were increases in Commerce (555), in RRB (266) and in SSB (247); but decreases were more widely noted.

These, seasonal in nature, occurred in Agriculture (1,995), Interior (743), Postoffice Department (1,602) and WPA (1,452). The Postoffice decrease was principally in substitute employment, and the decline in the administrative employes in WPA resulted from a consolidation of field forces.

During the month there were 827,701 employes in the executive branch, a decrease of 8,892 since the preceding month . . . The October pay roll was $122,944,783, as compared to $125,925,964 in September . . . The decrease in employment in the District was 616 and outside the District, 8,276, bringing the number of employes here to 110,812 and the total outside to 716,889.

* * * *

It's easy to understand why so many boys and girls come here to work for Uncle Sam; as an employer he must look pretty swell from a distance—and maybe he's not so bad in the closeup . . . And when they leave here, as they so frequently do, we've wondered what caused it—whether disillusionment or the tempting of better jobs . . . It was neither of these in the instance of Marguerite Collins, who worked until recently in Procurement, of Treasury.

She just got word that her brother, Bill Collins, 21, had been elected mayor of Whitesburg, Ky., had become, by the processes of a good smile, good sense and an election, the youngest mayor in America, maybe in the world . . . He needed a housekeeper, so sister Marguerite returned to her home for the task.

Try This Holiday Drink—
CAPT. LAWRENCE'S Famous Old RUM PUNCH

Captain Ezra Lawrence (born in Nantucket in 1805) always made for holidays a rum punch so delicious and festive that it has been used in his family ever since. We got this recipe from his great-grandson:

"Dissolve ¾ pounds brown sugar, then add 1 quart lemon juice, 2 quarts Virgin Islands Rum, 1 quart Brandy, 2 quarts water, 1 wineglass peach Brandy, 1 tablespoon maple syrup. Let stand 2 hours." (Fills about 50 punch glasses.)

To make this recipe nowadays, you need Government House Rum from the Virgin Islands. A sound, honest rum, distilled directly from cane juice.

They said the ceremony would be performed "within the next week or ten days" at the rectory of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Sixteenth street and Park road northwest, by the Rev. M. H. Hyle.

A native of Brandywine, Md., Bowie has long been prominent in Democratic circles in the county, where he has served three terms as State's attorney. After completing his schooling, he read law under the direction of Joseph K. Roberts, of the firm of Stanley & Roberts.

He first was elected State's attorney in 1923, but served only a three-year term. In 1930 he again was elected, and was re-elected three years ago.

Italy May Quit League; Council Called by Duce

Diplomats See Mussolini Ready to Cast Lot With Germany, Japan.

Rome, Dec. 9.—Indications came from high quarters tonight that the Fascist Grand Council, summoned for one of its dramatic midnight sessions Saturday, might announce Italy's resignation from the League of Nations.

Diplomats speculated as to whether withdrawal from the League—if it comes—would mean Il Duce had given up hope of coming to terms with Great Britain and France over his African conquests and his position in the Mediterranean Sea.

[In Berlin well-informed Nazi quarters said Italy is expected to announce her formal resignation from the League, according to the United Press. In Paris, semiofficial sources indicated the major European powers—Great Britain and France—may recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia if Mussolini abstains from resigning from the League.—Editor's note.]

Some expressed belief Mussolini had cast in his lot wholeheartedly with Germany and Japan, both resigned from the League and both recently linked with Italy in the Rome tripartite anti-Communist pact.

At Geneva, the possibility that Il Duce would follow his boycott of the League by resigning formally was seen in League circles as springing from his desire to place Italy upon the same footing as other members of the "Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis.

Announcement that the Grand Council's decision will be read from the balcony of the Palazzo Venezia, Il Duce's official residence, aroused belief it would be of international character.

McDonald Asks Speedy Action On Housing Act

House Committee Is Told Passage Will Not Cause Building Boom.

By the Associated Press.

Senators heard a plea yesterday for special session action on housing legislation and representatives received word quick passage would not result in an immediate building boom.

Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, told the Senate banking committee, "Whatever we do should be done right now, in the special session."

He said the FHA and the building industry would need time to lay the groundwork for the Administration's program to stimulate up to $16,000,000,000 of privately financed home construction.

Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National Bank, Washington, and former president of the American Bankers Association, was expressing to the House banking committee at the same time an opinion that only when business conditions improve will there be an increase in home building. Persons with small incomes, he said, are unwilling to invest in homes unless their employment is stable.

McDonald suggested the bill be amended to grant tax exemption to debentures to be issued by national mortgage associations, which would buy Government insured home mortgages and make their profit from the spread between what they pay on debentures and the interest received on mortgages.

Morton Bodfish, executive vice-president of the United States Building and Loan League, suggested that a $5,400 loan on a $6,000 dwelling would be too high in small cities and too low in large ones. He proposed that the limit range from $4,500 to $7,200, the Housing Administration to fix the figure according to size of a community and construction cost.

Cause For Resentment.

Reports that the Budget Bureau has slashed nearly $2,000,000 from the District budget may be considered good news by groups that are trying to hold new taxes to a minimum. Since details as to where cuts have been made are entirely lacking, the prospect of smaller municipal expenses is the more appealing. But that is only one side of a very complicated picture.

The simple fact that a Federal agency has authority to slash the city's budget is cause for deep resentment on the part of Washingtonians. Experience has shown that it is usually the items in which citizens are most interested that are cut, while outlays considered important by the Federal Government are spared. That is an inevitable result of the present system. And for that very reason the present system is becoming more and more intolerable.

Very few citizens will favor any reduction in the District Commissioners' estimates for the next fiscal year if that entails continuation of present inadequate service in the fields of public health, education, police protection, unemployment relief, etc. It is such deficiencies as these that the Commissioners have attempted to correct. Yet expenditures of this character have been ruthlessly slashed in the past by Federal officials who are interested in the District as the location of the Federal Capital City rather than as a great city in its own right.

Primarily this cutting of District appropriations by an agency unfamiliar with local needs is traceable to the preposterous system imposed upon a helpless political unit. But the Budget Bureau would lessen the irritation over this situation if it would cease to regard Washington as only another bureau in the Federal Government. Its failure to show respect for the carefully devised District budget makes a divorce of the Federal and District budget-making machinery imperative.

Until that reform is achieved, every change in the local budget as prepared by the Commissioners will inevitably be a challenge to District residents to demand a larger measure of control over the spending of their own taxes.

Mr. Ickes Lays Down The Law.

Every now and then Secretary Ickes has to have a go at such forces of darkness as have survived his conscientious work as head of the Interior Department. The country's fund of picturesque philippics is always the richer for these efforts. And that being the case, few will deplore any slight lack of consistency which may be found.

In his address before the Civil Liberties Union Mr. Ickes struck lightning blows at a many-headed dragon. There is ample justification for his warning that fascism stalks boldly in the wake of many a red scare. The absurd extremes to which this bogey may be pursued is currently illustrated by Brazil's ban on Edgar Rice Burroughs' "Tarzan, the Invincible," because of its alleged "communistic tendencies." And Mr. Ickes point stands out the more emphatically because of his reminder to Sumner Welles that fascism "is capable of leaping wide oceans" and his reminder to the President that "fascism has not been quarantined."

But Mr. Ickes was not content to lay fascism and communism low. He was particularly concerned over the trials of "Lilliputians" living among "Gargantuans." No doubt many tired businessmen, who are complaining bitterly these days about the way in which the Government dominates economic activity, thought they had found a champion at last. But no. It is true that Mr. Ickes referred to an "irresponsible and self-constituted" oligarchy, "benevolent and paternalistic at its best, despotic and predatory at its worst." But he was speaking of corporations and not the Government.

Nor was Mr. Ickes' protest against "an overlordship over the civil rights of the individual" a denunciation of the farm bill. Again he seemed to be talking about corporate czars. On that point, of course, there will be little dissent. But the Secretary's tongue lashing of ruthless corporate powers at the present moment sounds like the chastisement of a rather feeble dog while a wolf is in the flock.

Mr. Ickes was very severe with the Supreme Court because it has placed a broad interpretation on the Bill of Rights. But his sarcastic reference to the "moronic exhibitionism" of the Ku Klux Klan of a few years ago should not be taken as a personal attack on Mr. Justice Black. Mr. Ickes just threw that reference in to emphasize the wide range which his official excoriations can take.

As to Mr. Ickes' barbs about propaganda in the press, they will probably be most appreciated by the corps of publicity experts in his own department. For it is a part of their job to give wide newspaper circulation to the Secretary's remarks.

An Indefensible Levy.

"The Undistributed Profits Tax," a study prepared for Brookings Institution by M. Slade Kendrick, is a valuable contribution to a much-discussed subject, making use of extensive evidence yielded by experience with the tax law.

Replies from over 1,500 corporate officials to a questionnaire sent out by Senator Steiwer have been analyzed to determine the significance and the validity of the objections to the levy. This testimony has been examined not only from the interested viewpoint of corporate managements, but from that of the general economic welfare as well. And the result is a sweeping indictment of the taxation of undistributed profits and a demand for its repeal.

To businessmen who doubt whether Congress will consent to outright repeal, suggested amendments to the act designed to eliminate "some of the most flagrant weaknesses of the law" will be of great interest. To the public at large, however, technical shortcomings will appear of minor consequence as compared with the major economic dislocations resulting from the tax.

An overwhelming majority of replies from corporate managements indicate that surplus funds created from undistributed profits are used to finance plant expansion and make provision for lean times. One company reported that during the years of depression it paid out of its reserve earnings over $10,000,000. Without this fund to draw on, it would have been compelled greatly to decrease its pay roll.

This statement is typical of the experience of hundreds of corporations, and its significance is emphasized by official estimates indicating that during the years from 1930 to 1932, inclusive, the aggregate income disbursed by American business was almost $22,000,000,000 greater than the amount of income actually produced. If the present punitive taxes upon undistributed earnings had been in effect prior to those years, it is obvious that the accumulation of these cushioning surpluses would not have been possible.

Evidence has also been assembled from corporation executives, from investment bankers and from the S. E. C. to show how difficult it now is to obtain capital for various developmental purposes by bank borrowing, offerings of new securities or issuance to stockholders of scrip or paper dividends. It is pointed out that the investment market prefers seasoned securities. Hence much of the capital required by corporations, whether large or small, especially for developmental work, must come from their own funds; in other words, from surpluses built up out of undistributed profits.

Thus a varied and impressive array of evidence is brought forward to support the indictment of the undistributed profits tax as a deterrent to industrial expansion and economic progress. Furthermore, it is the sort of deterrent that handicaps most severely the corporations with weak or impaired capital structures, the heavily indebted corporations, the ones with highly variable earnings and the new enterprises operating in undeveloped fields. And added to that, the weight of evidence seems to show that the undistributed profits tax aggravates instead of alleviating the effects of business depression. At any rate, as the report states, the tax is not a certain preventive of depression, since it failed to check the present severe recession, which began in the summer of 1937.

The Mellon Tax Suit.

After more than three years of litigation the late Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, has been cleared of charges that he filed a false and fraudulent return for the purpose of evading income taxes.

The Board of Tax Appeals was unanimous in reaching this decision but it ruled against Mr. Mellon's claims to exemptions in some matters involving complicated legal questions. The net result is that the Government's claim to more than $3,000,000 in taxes has been cut to approximately $700,000. But the end is not yet in sight, as an executor for the estate announces that the claim for additional taxes will be contested.

Mr. Mellon's prominence and a widespread belief—whether justified or not—that he was a victim of political persecution, has made this particular tax suit something in the nature of a cause celebre. However, it is most important as a conspicuous illustration of the intolerable legal tangles which our complicated income tax laws and our blundering methods of tax administration create for thousands of taxpayers.

It is a pity that nobody knows just how much it has cost Mr. Mellon and the Government to fight out this tangled tax issue in the courts. But even without that knowledge it is safe to say that a settlement reached by negotiation would have been a gain all around. According to Donald D. Shepard, executor for the estate, the Treasury Department never accorded Mr. Mellon a hearing or responded to his suggestion that the case be settled in a friendly conference. In the light of his eventual vindication of fraud charges, the long legal fight seems all the more unwarranted.

The case itself provides a standing argument in favor of greater simplification of tax laws whose obscure provisions lead to a battle of legal wits, with nobody gaining but the lawyers and ill feelings aroused all around.

The Only Man In Step.

A total of 42 prominent industrialists composed the committee which drafted the resolutions adopted by the National Association of Manufacturers in New York on Wednesday. In addition to the contributions of committee members, suggestions from about 500 other individuals were incorporated in this "Platform for American Industry for 1938." So it is not surprising that the program has a patchwork appearance. That is inevitable in any platform which seeks to reduce a multitude of varying opinions to a single common denominator.

Beyond this, however, the program agreed to by the industrialists is frequently cloudy to the point of being contradictory in meaning. In one place its sponsors urge "limiting Government regulations to the prevention of abuses inimical to the public interest." A little later it is asserted that "adequate tariff protection is vital to American labor; American manufacturers offer their co-operation in the endeavor to secure such protection."

In other words the manufacturers, like every other group seeking preferential treatment from Government, readily identify "the public interest" and their own self-interest as being necessarily the same. About the only fundamental difference between the demands of WPA beneficiaries for "adequate" relief and that of the manufacturers for "adequate" protection is that the former are rather more honest. They do not assert, as they might, that they want Federal doles to develop a mass purchasing power vital to American employers. But the latter are still claiming that high tariffs are desired because "vital to American labor."

It may be assumed that a number of these captains of industry are of the Republican persuasion. So it is the more unfortunate that they did not hear, and savor, the wise advice presented to the Republican Party by Lewis Douglas just 24 hours before this "platform for American industry" was adopted. Will it (the G. O. P.) not see, said Mr. Douglas, "that if a subsidy is to be granted to one group, as a matter of ordinary justice it is impossible to withhold subsidies from other groups? Will it not conclude, as indeed I think it must conclude, that a nation so subsidized is a nation ultimately controlled and regulated by government itself?"

The answer, if one may judge by the attitude of the National Association of Manufacturers, appears to be in the negative. Though the temperate tone, and a number of the concrete proposals, in the association's manifesto is admirable it still holds that strongly preferential Government aid for business is as reasonable and proper as such assistance for other elements in the community is undesirable.

It is this ingrained lack of logic and proportion which, as much as anything, has led the Republican Governors of Vermont and New Hampshire to assert, in no uncertain language, that their party "as now constituted" is unable to grasp the opportunity which the mistakes of the Roosevelt Administration have placed before it.

The Wrong End Of The Avenue.

Margaret Mitchell recently lost a suit brought against a Dutch publisher who, she asserts, is pirating her "Gone With the Wind." Pending an appeal in Holland, she has turned to the Department of State for assistance. In so doing she went to the wrong end of Pennsylvania avenue. She should have gone to Capitol Hill.

For years now Congress has had before it a proposal to make the United States a member of the International Copyright Union. Two years ago the Senate gave unanimous consent to this country's participation in the Berne convention which would give automatic and virtually world-wide copyright to literary and artistic creations. But because a corroborating domestic statute was lacking, this vote was rescinded. And, though the Senate has approved it, the House has consistently blocked the needed legislation. So the entire matter is now at a standstill.

As a result, Miss Mitchell now finds her book published in Holland without her permission and without recompense for her. It isn't that the Dutch are particularly conscienceless. Almost all nations, including the United States, permit or until recently have permitted literary piracy. It was to end this obviously unsatisfactory condition that the International Copyright Union was formed. Failure of the United States to join throws American authors, editors, musicians, playwrights and even radio broadcasters at the mercy of foreign publishers and producers.

Readings For Mussolini

From the Birmingham News.

Mussolini is fond of referring to the glories of ancient Rome. He would restore for modern Italy some of those glories. Caesar seems to be his particular idol.

But just to keep the record straight for Mussolini and also to keep ourselves reminded that not all Romans were warriors, and in like manner not all Italians of today are warriors, let us quote two passages from Romans of Caesar's day:

Seneca: "We punish murderers and massacres among private persons. What do we respecting wars, and the glorious crime of murdering whole nations? The love of conquest is a murderess. Conquerors are scourges not less harmful to humanity than floods and earthquakes." (This might be considered with special reference to Ethiopia and what Mussolini calls Italy's "glorious destiny.")

Examination For Judges.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The first session of the Seventy-fifth Congress spent six months discussing the independence of the Federal judiciary. When the Constitution placed the appointment of judges in the hands of the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, it left a loophole which made the impressment of political influence all but inevitable. The political character of the Federal courts can usually be determined by that of the administration which exercises the appointing power.

A sub-committee of the Judiciary Committee of the Senate has just agreed to recommend the confirmation of Prof. Henry W. Edgerton for membership on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals, only after he had satisfied the committee of his views on the power of the court, to review an act of Congress. Had his views been contrary to those of the sub-committee an adverse report would doubtless have been forthcoming. It so happens that the inquisitive members of the sub-committee were the loudest champions of the freedom of the judiciary from executive interference during the recent raging Supreme Court controversary.

It was contended that it was highly improper that the President should appoint to the Supreme bench a justice foreknown to be in harmony with his own public policies.

It requires a sharp point in casuistry to differentiate between such foreknowledge on the part of the President and on part of the Senate.

Senator Borah asked the appointee whether or not he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. His negative assurance upon this point gave satisfaction all around. This query might be a salutary one to be plied to all future applicants, judicial or civil. The subsequent discovery of entanglement with this unpatriotic order might prove embarrassing to the appointee, to the Government, and to the public.

Lottery For Chest?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Community Chest uses quite a lot of psychology in putting their drive across. Appeals to the innate sense of pity in posters, talks on the radio, and so forth, not to mention a mountain of literature, have gone forth without stint or limit; yet the drive fell short.

This being so, why not appeal to another deep-seated emotion—the love of gain. I challenge anyone to say that the Community Chest drive would not have gone over the top and even been doubled or tripled by a well-conducted lottery held under the supervision of responsible authorities. Here we would have a painless method of raising the desired funds and at the same time afford a chance to some poor persons (it seems as though the winners of lotteries are almost always poor) to get a share of this world's goods.

Most people, I believe, resent being told what proportion of their salary they should give to this undoubtedly worthy cause. However, many would buy lottery tickets sold for small sums and be glad of the opportunity. Consider the success of the Irish Sweepstakes and other lotteries held in scores of other countries. Why not keep some of the millions of dollars pouring annually out of this country to support some of our own charitable institutions? PRO-LOTTERY.

Anti-Kidnapping Comparison.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It has been nearly two decades since the first antilynching bill passed the House and was killed in the Senate. And it seems as though the bill that is now pending before the Senate will meet the same fate. Some Southern gentlemen are protesting against this bill on the ground that it interferes with States' rights. But there was no cavil or long debate over the antikidnaping bill that passed both Houses of Congress about five years ago. The State of New Jersey did not think that the Congress had invaded any of her rights, or any other State in the Union. E. W. MAXSON.

Mr. Welles' Address.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The address delivered by the Undersecretary of State, the Hon. Sumner Welles, on December 6, before the Inter-American Conference being held in the Chamber of Commerce under the auspices of George Washington University, deserves more than passing attention.

He stated clearly and concisely the present policy of the Department of State. The policy of noninterference in the internal affairs of our sister republics to the south has become definitely distinctive of the Roosevelt Administration; and, with the addition of "tolerance" in viewing changes in governmental form in those countries, marks the adoption by this Administration of the only intelligent, clear-sighted and practical policy in our relationship with our Latin-American neighbors that will bring about the better understanding which we so much desire.

It has been apparent for years that our friendly, commercial and economic relations with the Latin-American countries are of tremendous importance to our prosperity, and developments in other parts of the world during the last two years particularly have indicated that they are rapidly becoming vital to our well-being.

It is only through the exportation of our surplus productions that we will be able to maintain our present standard of living and prevent an economic collapse that would end in a change of our governmental structure to either a fascistic or communistic state.

We have no more right to take snap judgment and render opinions with reference to forms of government or changes in government in the Latin-American countries than we have to criticize or interfere with one of our neighbors, unless our interests are directly and adversely affected.

Our love of the sensational has encouraged and built up in this country a tendency on the part of our press to over-emphasize, and, at times, to exaggerate one-sided statements of purported facts to a point of extreme unfairness. When this is done in dealing with happenings in the Latin-American countries, the result is that it disturbs our friendly relations with those countries and tends to interject us into their domestic and political affairs.

Mr. Welles' appeal on behalf of our State Department for a more tolerant and considerate attitude toward our Latin-American neighbors is, therefore, most timely. That, and minding our own business, will go much further toward cementing the friendly and commercial relations with those countries than all of the flowery speeches and platitudes of orators.

Loans To Veterans.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The ride given thrift, and to those who in the practice of this virtue look beyond today, is one just source of criticism against the present Administration.

Veterans, particularly, have been pictured by deplorers with storm-tossed imaginations as gougers seeking to wheedle every possible centime from the Government, the bonus payment being mentioned as a mere prelude to greater raids. While this last fear is probably grossly exaggerated, it cannot be said to apply to those who have maintained their Government insurance to date.

Under date of December 6, a financial news item says: "New York Life Insurance Co., one of the largest in its field, today announced its officers will recommend to directors reduction of the interest rate on loans to policyholders from 6 to 5 per cent."

Local banks, though bloated with money they are anxious to loan on good collateral at 5 per cent, generally pass up loans secured by Veterans Bureau policies because of the non-assignable feature. Thus the thrifty veteran, who hasn't much over his insurance, is discriminated against if he seeks to refinance his Veterans' Bureau policy loan.

Does the above general exposition contain an idea worthy of Congress' attention? It is hoped so.

Maxwell Conviction.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The sob-sisters defending Edith Maxwell are getting on my nerves. The writer has spent some time in the Maxwell locale and feels justified in asserting that the people in and around Wise are satisfied that the verdict was as it should have been.

Too many meddling reporters and reformers have stuck their noses into the case—not because they were interested in justice, but because they smelled something packed full of human interest and sales value. "Edith Maxwell" was a box-office attraction on any street corner. Consequently, the public had to swallow stories that were more fancy than fact.

The defenders of Edith Maxwell would do well to review the facts of the case—from the Wise angle—not from the District of Columbia or Pottsville-on-the-Potomac angle. If defenders have doubts concerning the popularity of Trig Maxwell, they should remember that his funeral was exceptionally well attended, not by the curiously morbid from the outside, but by his own kind and class. True, these people of southwest Virginia are endowed with an almost Latin temperament—quick to friendship and to anger, but their temperament is not on trial.

If the sob-sisters are sincere in their fight for justice—the cases of Tom Mooney and the Scottsboro boys merit their attention—there you will find the festering sores of class and racial prejudice and injustice—not in Wise. Edith Maxwell has been judged by her own kind and class. VIRGINIAN.

Railroads' Plight.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading the letter of my neighbor's daughter, Miss Elaine Powell Heiskell, complaining of the Union Station's soot, then reading in an adjoining column Mr. Ziegler's letter, "Railroads and Trucks in Competition," I felt it about answered her question as to why the railroad companies couldn't wash the station, the same as the postoffice, in the next block, did. However, may I add a few words to Mr. Ziegler's enlightening letter?

The railroads, like the farmer since 1930 when the Democrats came into power, have had to exist as best they could without profit. If any improving is done, it must be done on borrowed money, whereas the postoffice could improve with public money.

A superintendent for a large lumber and wood concern told me it was his painful job to drive around about 200 miles over southern Maryland November 24 to stop his tie-cutters. (That must have spread a sour flavoring over their Thanksgiving turkey.) If the railroads are unable to cut the ties so necessary to the upkeep of the roads, then, Miss Elaine, don't worry about a little soot. PERRY F. SKINNER.

Thanksgiving Without Winnie.

TIME, with her arnica bottle and healing unguents, has effaced the black-and-blue spots on my heart and soothed the gaping wounds inflicted Thanksgiving Day during my adventure in the kitchen. It's got so now we can discuss that memorable day without the neighbors "callin' the wagon."

In humbling myself to the point of recounting my experience I am actuated by the most laudable of motives—I would save others the agony of mind and bitterness of spirit which whelmed me last Thanksgiving during my adventure in the kitchen.

It is possible some unfortunate on Christmas Day may encounter a set of circumstances such as confronted me, and it is to him that I would speak; yes, plead with the tremolo stop out, 'Ware stove, 'ware pot, 'ware pan. Shun the whole misbegotten business, and take the family to a restaurant or feed 'em beans, baked or b'iled, if the cook takes a runout powder on you the day before Christmas.

That's what started my trouble. Wandering Winifred—the Winifred is hers, but I added the "wandering" for the sake of euphony and to really describe Winnie. When she came to us she had more relatives than there are Smiths and Joneses in the Washington city directory. Now she has none, no, not one. They died, all died, every cussed last one of 'em and have gone "to get what was a-comin' to 'em," so Winnie said, the day before Thanksgiving.

I lost my tally sheet so I have to rely on memory but I'm certain that death laid his hand on eighty of those near and dear to her before he took a crack at that last one. Well, Winnie departed on her mournful, so she said, mission, and light and gayety went out of my life, but I didn't know it at the time.

In the refrigerator was a turkey of ancient lineage and fullness of years. There was a certain calm dignity about him which I did not, at the moment, appreciate. I was woefully ignorant when I embarked on my adventure. It has since been disclosed that the man who owned the turkey had a kind heart and almost no scruple. He let that old tom turkey die a natural death and then sold him to me. That's what he did. A large yellow bowl was also in the refrigerator and it contained an incipient—a body might say, cotyledonous—mince pie. There were various other knicknacks and odds and ends which I had never before seen naked, in an uncook state.

And Winnie was away; gone to bury her dead brother, the last one she had. I saw him the other day. He was right pert and spry, and, just between you and me, I don't think he ever died at all. If he did he got right over it.

The Skipper and I had a monologue over the situation and when things quieted down a little bit I said I would take that Thanksgiving dinner through its infancy and bring it to the table in the full vigor of maturity and there the adventure started.

Turn me loose in the woods, a good hemlock bark fire going, with a skillet and a gallon crock—it must have a good tight cover—and I can shake together a mess of vittles; from fried trout to cornbread and baked beans—beans in a hole, you know the kind. But it's a darned long ways from Potter County, Pa., to Chevy Chase, Md.; gas doesn't operate like hemlock bark; turkeys and trout are different critters and cornbread and mince pie are no kin. As for a roasting pan, it is separated from its ancestor, the skillet, by a bar sinister.

For five long hours I basted, lambasted and lamented, and the turkey slowly condescended to take on a light coat of tan. The mince pie? Oh, that went into the discard early; it erupted along about noon, Eastern standard time, and I spent the next day scrubbing the oven with wood ashes. They are grand for mopping up after a mince pie wreck. I burned both hands and singed my eyebrows off before I got that pie out in the open where I could deal with it adequately. Then, hero-like, I returned to my basting. I basted with care; I basted with judgment; I basted with prayer, but, by the high hills of home, I basted in vain!

Aside from being allowed to live out the fullness of his years that turkey suffered from prenatal influences. I am convinced his mother once resided in Dayton, Ohio, and marked him for an automobile tire.

The shades of night were drawing in when the turkey came to the table. He was brown all right, but there was derision in the way he had his wings folded under where he used to wear his head. It was defiance in repose and it seemed to say: "Go ahead. Whack away and see if I care." We had—had, mind you—two sets of carving tools when I started and now we haven't ary a one. Busted? That's right.

The shades of night had got all done falling when I gave up and the turkey lay and leered at me, and his bosom was without mark or blemish.

So, I say dine out, or eat beans if your Wandering Winnie runs out on you.

Tax On Football.

I SEE by the New York Daily News that four State universities—Iowa, Minnesota, West Virginia and Georgia—deny the right of the Federal Government to collect the amusement tax on their football tickets and are suing for the refund of $119,000, claiming that because they are State institutions their football teams are agencies of their respective State governments. This is a new one.

PEGLER.

The football business is a branch of the amusement business, as practical as the baseball business, which does pay taxes, or the movie business or the prize fight business. It has more plant than any other department of sport except golf, which pays its taxes, and everything about it, from the recruiting of replacements to the sale of tickets and the ballyhoo, is conducted in a professional manner and mainly by professionals.

The football revenue is already exempt from the income tax. As educational institutions the colleges all are excused from kicking in with a legitimate share of their profits on the strength of a Supreme Court ruling of a few years ago which holds that no matter how much income is made it is tax-exempt if it belongs to a religious, charitable or educational institution.

• • • •

IN THE CASE in point a religious institution was given immunity from the income tax on a commercial business in chocolate, and the precedent is such that anyone may organize a phony religion, take out articles of incorporation, open a church house in an office or former grocery store and then start an automobile factory or a department store as a side line, the profits of which would be free of income tax. Many of the institutions which enjoy this exemption actually do operate commercial business in competition with private dealers who have to pay not only that income tax but other taxes not applicable to their institutional rivals. The private operators emit a faint, plaintive squawk now and then, which relieves their feelings but does no other good.

State universities with profitable football teams are doubly exempt from the income tax on their gate receipts—first under their classification as educational institutions and again as agencies of their respective State governments. A coach getting $15,000 a year (incidentally, few of them do get that much, but it is a nice figure for purposes of illustration) may also claim that he is an agency of a State government and beg to be excused.

You ought to read that section of the revenue act some time. It exempts labor organizations, and that goes for organizations which themselves collect an income tax on the earnings of members who were exempted from the Federal tax, because the Government didn't have the heart to take anything from people in brackets that low.

It goes for labor organizations which conspire among themselves to keep men out of certain lines of work by imposing prohibitive initiation fees or merely by rejecting their applications.

• • • •

CEMETERY COMPANIES, which claim that they are not operated for profit and whose net earnings do not inure to the benefit of any private shareholder or individual, also are exempt. But go around some time and pretend that you are shopping for an eight-by-four patch of God's Green Earth in which to wait for reveille and then wonder how come such prices if there is no profit motive. Foot frontage on the best street in town will come no higher than some of the socially exclusive sites in a place where all men are supposed to be equal.

I am inclined to believe that Joel Sayre had a better idea than he thought in his travesty on football and the underworld rackets which he called "Racketty Rax." In this daffy little aberration a lot of hoodlums bought an old brewery, started a college and went into the football business in a large way, but Sayre probably didn't know that they could have started a theater, too, a chain store system, a hotel, a factory and a fight club all under the income tax immunity of an educational institution. They couldn't have taken any dividends, of course, but salaries, yes, up to and including the limit of the income. They could have started a labor union, too, but fact had the jump on fiction by many years in that respect.

Germany's Colonies

Action On Hitler's Cry For Equal Rights And Return Of Pre-War Possessions Lies Ultimately With League Of Nations.

By Bertram Pickard,
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Geneva.

DESPITE THE avowed informal character of Lord Halifax's visit to Germany, the whole question of a general settlement between Germany and the great powers of western Europe is now to the fore, including discussion of Germany's colonial claims.

Since Germany has not publicly formulated her claim for colonies, it is still not possible to say precisely what form such claims would take. It goes without saying that the present German government rejects lock, stock and barrel, the colonial clauses of the Treaty of Versailles. But mere repudiation of these clauses, after all, would greatly advance the German case, since in the colonial field it does not lie in Germany's power to take "equality" by unilateral act as in the case of the reoccupation of the Rhineland or in the matter of rearmament.

It is often wondered why Herr Hitler, who opposed the ideas of overseas colonies for Germany so vigorously in "Mein Kampf," should now be equally vociferous in arguing Germany's need of a colonial empire. This change of front is explained by some as due to tactical considerations. If by that is meant the presumption that Germany will not press her claim but bargain it away for something else, then I believe such reasoning will prove to be ill-founded.

Hitler's present insistence upon the colonial issue is probably in part due to the economic advantages that Dr. Schacht and others believe would accrue from the possession of colonies. But without doubt the major ground for the policy is to be found in the psychological realm. Insistence on equality of rights (Gleichberechtigung) for Germany has proved at every turn a powerful lever for uniting the German people. There is no clearer case of inequality remaining as between Germany and other great powers than in the colonial field, where Germany has neither colonies nor mandates.

Germany's Formal Claim Indicated By Ex-Governor.

IF THIS BE a correct analysis of German motives, it is not very difficult to divine how the official German claim will sooner or later be formulated. The following sentences from an article on "Peace and the Colonial Problem" by Dr. Heinrich Schnee, formerly governor of German East Africa, may be taken as a sufficiently accurate expression of the official view:

"Germany has thus been treated, not only as a nation with inferior rights, but also as one of inferior worth. It does not need to be pointed out that this is an intolerable situation for a great nation. To me the alternatives seem to be either extension of the mandates system to the colonies of all nations, or the abolition of a mandates system applied unilaterally to the German colonies; in the first case, the transfer of mandates for the German colonies to Germany; in the second case, the handing back of the German colonies as such."

It is obvious that, in the last analysis, any change in the attribution or administration of the former German colonies will have to be decided at Geneva. The present mandatories may be in a position to exercise a decisive influence upon such decision, but they are not competent to decide matters by themselves, singly or collectively. As one authority on mandates puts it: "The past . . . years have at least shown that wherever sovereignty resides, it does not reside in the mandatory."

Where, precisely, it does reside is not so easy to say. It should be remembered that, in accordance with the provisions of Article 119 of the Treaty of Versailles, Germany renounced "in favor of the principal allied and associated powers all her rights and titles over her overseas possessions." Since the Supreme Council, which originally distributed the mandates, no longer exists, legal opinion differs as to whether the sovereignty over the mandated territories resides with the chief allied and associated powers or with the League, or with both. But Germany is not failing to point out that she already has the support of one of the chief allied powers, Italy, while it is probable that she can count upon the support of a second, Japan, as well.

United States Retained Right to Vote on Colonies.

THE POSITION of the United States, it should be recalled, is a special one. At a point subsequent to the original allocation of mandates by the Supreme Council the United States withheld its indorsement from the Treaty of Versailles, including the Covenant. Nevertheless, the United States Government has always reserved to itself the right to a voice in the disposition of the former German colonies and presumably would still insist upon being consulted in any future changes of attribution or administration to be made.

Assuming for the sake of argument that the present mandatories of the former German African colonies, as well as the chief allied powers, agreed to grant equality of rights in the colonial sphere to Germany, what steps could they propose at Geneva? There are two extreme courses that could be followed.

On the one hand, it would be theoretically possible to so extend the mandates system as to include most, if not all, existing colonies within the system, in which case the present colonial powers would voluntarily accept mandates for their present colonies, while the mandates for the former German colonies would be transferred to Germany. Admittedly, if such a course were to be followed, it would involve a radical transformation of the present Mandates Commission, which would need not only to be considerably enlarged, but would be obliged to allocate detailed responsibility to sub-commissions. Moreover, it is probable that at least some of the commissioners would need to be permanently employed upon the work.

At the other extreme, it is technically possible to envisage the complete abandonment of the mandates system. This presumably could be effected by general agreement to return the mandates to Germany as colonies pure and simple.

As a matter of fact, it is very difficult to imagine that either one or the other of these extreme logical solutions would receive the necessary support to bring it within the sphere of practical politics.

But that being the case, it is difficult to envisage any plan which is both practicable and satisfactory from the German point of view.

Nazis Accepted Gradual Reform in Question of Arms.

IT MAY BE taken for granted that National Socialist Germany would never compromise the principle of equal rights. On the other hand, as experience showed in the case of armaments, for example, there was at one time a readiness to consider a form of agreement which envisaged the progressive realization of equality over a period of years, provided always that the principle were granted at once.

Is such a possibility conceivable also in the colonial field? In theory at least a procedure of this kind could be worked out. Suppose, for example, Germany were conceded in one way or another some colonial territory in full title. And suppose, further, that one or more of the existing mandates were transferred to her. Then as token of an eventual equality of rights the present mandatories would need only to accept voluntarily a mandate for some existing colony, however limited in size, while continuing to exercise the mandate over present mandated territory not transferred to Germany.

Such a plan may seem fantastically complicated on the face of it. It is only fantastic, however, on two assumptions. First, that one or other of the logical solutions would be more easily realized. Or, second, that Germany's demand for equal rights in the colonial field is not seriously meant, and would in due time be abandoned.

But as a matter of cold fact history shows that no great power will ever rest content with any position of inferior status. Moreover, in Germany's case, remembering the events of the past few years, there seems every reason to think that the claim of equal rights will be persisted in until met in one way or another.

Flying Trapeze

By John Waldron

"Shakspere" Vs. "Shakespeare."

MRS. CLARK in her volume defends a thesis first propounded (1920) by a retired English schoolmaster, J. Thomas Looney: that the author of the great plays of "Shakespeare"—who must be distinguished from the Stratford actor, "Shakspere"—was the Lord Great Chamberlain of England, the first noble in the land, the Queen's favorite: the seventeenth Earl of Oxford, Edward de Vere.

• • • •

HERE IS A GOD'S PLENTY of Elizabethan "toys" and fancies—anagrams, hidden allusions, striking coincidences, and concealing-revealing devices, a very paradise of dainty devices—for those who dare risk playing with the problem of the authorship of the "Shakespeare" plays.

If one feels, as Mrs. Clark does (and the basic impulse in all these challenges of Shakespeare's right to his honors is, I suspect, this feeling) that old John Shakespeare's son as the author of these plays is an "impossible" person, he is faced with the need of uncovering an author more nearly to heart's desire, preferably a very noble lord: Bacon, Pembroke, Southampton, Derby, Rutland, or another.

• • • •

MRS. CLARK sets "aristocratic feeling" down as an essential qualification of "Shakespeare" as early as the seventeenth word of her text. That, I think, is a fair demand. The Shakespeare of the "academic" biographies meets it, however. The man who emerges from those careful constructions of all the facts—not only of the man but of the ways of his time—ordered by very cautious inferences, is one very nicely cut to the lines justly fixed in Mrs. Clark's ideal author for the plays and poems.

Shakespeare, though he had no great title, had gentle blood from his Arden mother. What he had, certainly, was the great gift—of whose human giving is it when it comes?—of imaginative insight and sympathy and the corresponding plastic power that makes the artist. That is the thing that counts. Milton was no archangel, but he rendered a fairly acceptable one; Mrs. Woolf is no Victorian spaniel, but she has given us a most plausible Flush.

• • • •

I SUGGEST these themes for speculation:

(I.) Isn't it likely that Jeeves as an ardent observer of it from without will do a better job of talking or writing (granted a gift for that sort of thing) about "aristocratic feeling" than will milord who suffers it as a bewildering, troublesome actuality inside him, as his taken-for-granted-self?

(II) How are we to account for the spitting cattiness (Mrs. Clark, of course, though she, too, loves a lord, is not guilty of that lack of restraint) of, say, Mark Twain's "Is Shakespeare Dead?" Shades of Natural Aristocracy! The man who moved from a stubbed-toe childhood in a small Missouri river town into the world of letters by way of the composing rooms of newspapers to the position of Rajah of American letters and the friendship of kings, writes a most viciously snobbish attack on the claims of the small-town lad—chiefly because he was a small-town lad.

• • • •

IF ONLY Logan Pearsall Smith could be induced to deal with those fascinting themes (don't miss the footnotes on page 31 of his "On Reading Shakespeare") what a rich book we should have. If Mr. John Livingstone Lowes could be brought to find time for even a brief volume—written for Anti-Shakespeareans—on the nature of poetry, on the ways that genius gathers the stuff of its great illusions. . .

• • • •

(Should the reader like a quick glance at the present state of this question, he may find interesting the debate carried on between an Oxford supporter and a university professor in the May 1, 8, 22 (1937) numbers of the "Saturday Review of Literature.")

• • • •

HOWEVER, THE LABOR of setting up and developing this thesis will by no means have been lost. The alchemists and their more recent followers, too, have set up at times some odd hypotheses and not without highly profitable results. The established findings of the newly stimulated research into the career of Edward de Vere—his relations to important persons of high and low estate of his time, his connections with the theater and with Burghley's propaganda machine—can certainly be of use to those who are trying to see Elizabeth's day in as clear a light as possible.

The rush of mental movement in this book to the reader used to the slower paced studies of Actor William's Friends is dizzying. The unhampered swing of it (Lord Oxford was very possibly Euphuistic John Lyly, too!) is bewildering. The mind—uttering desperately its prayer in fragments of the great Stratford Epitaph—is swung from the trapeze of conclusion to the trapeze of wider conclusion in an airy world of nightmare. There may be daring young men—and ladies, too—who enjoy that kind of exercise. This is a book for them.

"THE MAN WHO WAS SHAKESPEARE," by Eva Turner Clark. (Richard R. Smith, $3.50.)

Lesser Lyres

"STARS ARE CAUGHT," by Richmond George Anthony. (The Bard Press, Jackson, Mo., $1.35.)
"IT WAS WISDOM," by Krebs Friend. (Margent Press, New York.)
"A MISTY SEA," by Anne Moore. (Southworth-Anthoensen Press, Portland, Me., $2.50.)
"NO BEAUTY IN BATTLE," by Barbara Young. (Paebar Co., New York, $2.50.)

SOME OF THE SMALLER PUBLISHERS are famous for their services to poets, and four volumes from as many presses have lately come to hand.

First, Richmond George Anthony, who conducts a verse column on the Niagara Falls, N. Y., Gazette, has brought out his second brochure of poems, under the title, "Stars Are Caught." Twenty-seven in number, they range over a wide field of subject matter and seem to be something of an "impressionistic omelet" (his own phrase). Though this poet seems so far to have caught few stars, he exhibits a knack for capturing a succinct moment both common and uncommon experiences. His opening poem, "Who Walks With Stars Must Go Alone," and "I Am Thirty" are among the best; the latter appeared also in the recently published "Contemporary American Men Poets." His previous volume was called "Harp and Harmonica."

• • • •

A SMALL BUT PRECIOUS volume of free verse is Mr. Friend's "It Was Wisdom," brought out in a limited edition. The title is taken from the final poem, ending:

It was wisdom to take my knowledge from a fine oak tree
and to learn the voice of the silence.

These are poems that are not gathered in at a single reading: they are profound but seldom obscure, full of quiet imagery and cast in satisfying rhythms that are almost Biblical in form and feeling.

• • • •

IN THE HALF-HUNDRED POEMS that comprise "A Misty Sea" Anne Moore has shown that she possesses a generous lyric capacity. All are in consciously wrought free verse, some rhymed, with a great deal of imagism for its own sake. As a whole it seems to me that the collection is less satisfying than the author's previous book of poems, "Children of God and Winged Things"—first, because of the repetition of form for all manner of subject and mood and because of a tendency toward overstatement, leaving less than enough to the reader's fancy.

• • • •

"NO BEAUTY IN BATTLE" has probably a wider appeal than any of the three preceding volumes discussed. Though Miss Young chooses mostly conventional themes, her treatment of them is consistently her own. She does not overdo any one form or manner. This makes for an unusually readable collection. She is a poet not averse to letting her fancy roam widely, and in her final poem, "The End of the World," she has given us a revelation of great imagination and beauty. "Through a Glass Darkly" has a welcome echo of Emily Dickinson:

If I could be as sure of life
As I am sure of death,
It would be easier by far
To draw this constant breath.

• • • •

And I must not be hesitant,
But step with valiance out
Beyond the little lanes of life,
To learn what death's about.

Miss Young's book is illustrated by three unpretentious but beautiful drawings by Kahlil Gibran.

PAUL H. OEHSER.

Tom McCarthy

Learns That 'Con' Men Don't Like Washington.

"EVERYBODY has a bit of larceny in his soul," the confidence man told Roger Robb, assistant United States district attorney. "They all want something for nothing," he told Mr. Robb. "And that's how the 'con' man gets by."

McCARTHY.

Roger Robb was in sort of a reminiscent mood when I dropped into his office in the District Supreme Court Building. And the conversation drifted around to confidence games.

"That 'con' man," Mr. Robb told me, "was working one of the oldest games known. A game so simple that I couldn't understand how people fell for it. And he explained it by saying that everybody liked to get something for nothing — even if it did shade the law.

"That fellow's racket—he's now serving 2 to 7 years for it, incidentally—was the 'dropped pocketbook.'

"He'd go up to a stranger on the street and ask the way to a prominent church or the Y. M. C. A. He'd establish himself that way. Then he'd try to start a conversation.

"Just about that time his confederate, a few feet away, would pretend to pick a pocketbook from the sidewalk. Looking rather sheepish, the confederate would come over and announce that since they'd seen him find it he supposed they would want their cut.

"The next step was to get the victim to draw money from the bank, to prove that he could live for some time without touching his share of the money in the pocketbook. The reason given was that since the money had been lost it would probably be searched for, and suspicion could only be avoided by keeping it out of circulation for some months.

"Well, when the victim drew the money from the bank to prove that he could live for some months before touching his share, they'd get their hands on the money through some pretext. And the not-so-honest victim would realize that he'd simply been a sucker.'

• • • •

"THE FUNNY THING about confidence games is that people almost fight for a chance to be trimmed. One of our headquarters detectives recognized a confidence man, who was talking to a woman on the street.

"He saw that she had probably been singled out as a victim; so he went over and warned her. He told her just how she would be 'taken.' Instead of thanking the officer, she threatened to report him for annoying her on the street.

"That happened on a Saturday. Monday she came down and announced that she'd been 'taken' to the tune of $1,000.

"Confidence men come by their name rightly," Mr. Robb said. "They can build more trust in the victim than an honest man ever could. They can cash their bad checks in places where you and I could hardly cash a certified check."

Even the embassies here in town have victims of the 'con' men. One gentleman, according to Mr. Robb, worked the Army and Navy set and then tackled the embassies.

Posing as a naval officer on shore leave and using an Army and Navy register, he'd introduce himself as a friend of the officer's son or relative. He'd tell them that on his last voyage he'd met the officer's son in some foreign station and that the son had sent home, in his care, a beautiful Oriental rug.

"He was always very considerate," Mr. Robb said. "He'd tell his victims that he didn't like to bring it up, but that some duty was owing on the rug. He'd collect his $30 for the duty, and that was the last they'd hear from him.

"Then he took an embassy into camp in the same way and, using the car provided by the embassy, he went around town cashing bad checks. When asked by a shopkeeper for identification, he'd merely point to the car outside with its chauffeur and diplomatic plates."

• • • •

ABOUT THAT TIME, John Fihelly, another of the district attorney's staff, dropped into the office. His contributions to the conversation were the petty rackets which would give sound reason to believe that Barnum was right.

"We had one case," he said, "in which a fellow offered, through magazine ads, a 'fine engraving of George Washington—for only a dollar.' People would send him the dollar, and he'd send them a fine engraving of Washington all right, but it would be on a postage stamp.

"The funniest one I ever heard of, though," Mr. Fihelly said, "was the fellow who used the advertising columns of magazines which featured articles to 'sell or swap.'

"This fellow advertised that he had a lion which he would sell or swap. Through the mail he made a deal to sell the lion, and the victim sent him some article or other plus a sum of money for the lion.

"Then the fellow with the lion wrote a letter to the victim, asking him if he'd care to buy a cage for the lion. In the next mail came the money for the cage. And the victim is still waiting for the lion and cage."

"But this is a bad town for confidence men," Roger Robb broke in. "These cases we've mentioned have been settled at least to the extent of sending up the 'con' men. However, that doesn't bring back the victim's money. And as long as people think they can get something for nothing or insist on trusting absolute strangers you probably can never stamp it out."

I asked Mr. Robb what he meant when he said that this was a bad town for 'con' men.

"They're a funny bunch," he told me. "They've almost got a union. They never branch out into other types of crime. And they club together. There is almost a union of 'con' men, just as there is an unincorporated brotherhood of pickpockets.

"Clubbing together and sharing their information, they have the big cities rated as easy, or tough. They won't tackle the tough ones if they can help it.

"And knowing they'll go up for possibly more than half a dozen years for pulling a job here, they steer clear of this town."

Jury Decision Due Monday on Auto Financing

'Dealer Coercion,' 'Excessive Profits' Investigated by U. S. Lawyers.

By the Associated Press.

Justice Department attorneys await a Federal grand jury decision at Milwaukee, Wis., next Monday which will spell success or failure for the department's attempt to win indictments against Chrysler Corporation, Ford Motor Co., General Motors Corporation and four affiliated auto finance companies, they said yesterday.

Since September 23, Government attorneys led by Russell Hardy, a special assistant to Attorney General Cummings, has been presenting evidence to the jury.

Neither Cummings nor his aides have divulged details of the Government's charges. Among the practices investigated, a recent department statement revealed, were "dealer coercion" and "excessive profits included in financing charges."

The investigation was initiated at the request of independent finance companies who charged they were victims of unfair trade practices.

Cummings disclosed he had held a series of conferences with representatives of the manufacturers and finance companies involved, but that he rejected all consent decree proposals. The grand jury at Milwaukee, he said in a statement, "is said to be ready to report its findings Monday."

Appeal to Men Urged On Yule Advertisers

Advertising appeals for early Christmas shopping should be directed solely to men, Edward D. Shaw, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, yesterday advised local retailers.

Women have been quick to take advantage of opportunities for early buying, but men so far have failed to do their holiday shopping until Christmas stocks have become somewhat depleted, he said.

Heavy Express Traffic Expected for Holidays

Unusually heavy express traffic is expected during the pre-Christmas season, Division Supt. C. W. Turner of the Railway Express Agency said yesterday.

Urging early "shopping and shipping," he declared that "holiday shipments can be sent by express up to the last moment."

Sniffling Congressmen Demand Free Grapefruit Juice for Colds

By the United Press.

Sneezing and sniffling Congressmen crowded around Representative Joe (Old Doc Citrus-Cure-for-Colds) Hendricks (Democrat), of Florida, tonight and told him in no uncertain terms that he had better produce some free grapefruit juice—or else:

The Union might secede from Florida.

An official announcement would proclaim to the world that California citrus had the Florida product skinned by a mile.

The whole thing started when Hendricks offered to play doctor for Congress, and informed his colleagues that a sure-fire cure for colds was two aspirins, a teaspoon of soda and a glass of water followed two minutes later by a large glass of Florida grapefruit juice.

He warned them that only Florida grapefruit would do. California juice, he hinted, would develop all kinds of complications such as rickets and hangovers.

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan rounded up a group of Congressmen who had the sniffles, aspirins, soda and water, but no Florida grapefruit.

"If you provide the Florida grapefruit," Hoffman told Hendricks, "I'll provide the colds."

After muttering something about "what canal," Hendricks announced he would write for a carload or so of grapefruit—prepaid by the shippers.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

To illustrate the prophetic power and omniscience of Big Business, the story is going the rounds at the Capitol that just before the last election the boards of directors of two of the greatest American corporations were polled about whether Roosevelt or Landon would win.

• • • •

One directorate recorded its unanimous conviction that Landon would be victorious . . . On the other, only the chairman felt that Roosevelt had a chance . . . And quite a few directors backed their opinions heavily with cash . . .

Shrewdest minds in the country, too, pipelines out in every direction. (Fortunately, a little of that betting money came my way.)

• • • •

A charming Washington hostess tells me that even the most urbane socialites in the Capital suffer excruciatingly from a maladroit mishap at a social function . . . Once the Baron de Cartier, Ambassador from Belgium, who was sitting next to her, unfurled his napkin with aplomb, only to send a roll, which had been cunningly concealed in it, skittering cross the floor, at the beginning of a great dinner.

"—His Excellency lost oyster and roll"

He was momentarily agonized until she, with the true instincts of a great lady, also whiplashed her roll forth. . . .

A moment later the Ambassador attacked a treacherous oyster, which slithered off the table to the carpet.

He looked at her as if undone.

"Shall I pick it up?" asked the Baron, "or shall I just stamp it in?"

• • • •

The smear-Farley campaign has almost succeeded in painting him to the country as a scheming, devious, sinister, greasy politician, even beyond other Postmasters General in my somewhat short memory . . . The portrait has been overdone.

Actually, he is pious, clean-cut, hard-working and about as sinister and Machiavellian a schemer as Jack Oakie . . . His smooth political spadework is as thoroughly in the American tradition as the practice that a light hitter should bunt with a man on first and none down.

• • • •

A discreet lady who had a glimpse at a letter written by the next-to-last Mrs. Simpson to the new Mrs. Simpson, when the captain was visiting in the States just before Wallis divorced him, throws a remarkable new light on the plight in which Wallis found herself.

• • • •

The letter was to the then Mrs. Raffray, the patrician lady who married Capt. Simpson last month . . . Wally wrote thanking her for being nice to Capt. Simpson during his visit.

There is only one Ernest, wrote Wally, affectionately, in approximately those words; and she had always been content with him.

But contentment, she reminded her girlhood friend, had never been enough for her; and she did not know how fate would sway her in the solitary decision she had to make.

"—Jimmy and Henry laughed"

POTOMAC PIFFLE: It's rumored that some ex-Senators still owe the Senate restaurant for meals . . . Senators Hale, of Maine, and Green, of Rhode Island, are often mistaken for each other by citizens in the galleries; there's a strong resemblance which neither needs deny . . . Why did one of the highest ranking generals in Washington sit on the goal line at the Army-Navy game, far from the favored 50-yard-line seats?

• • • •

Someone saw Jimmy Roosevelt in a close-up seat at "I'd Rather Be Right," laughing uproariously at the razzing of Dad's administration . . . My scouts report that Secretary Morgenthau, too, laughed and laughed pluckily — except when the burlesque Morgenthau on the stage sang that little song about balancing the budget.

• • • •

But young John Roosevelt exhibited a new primness with his resentment of the word "libido" and the razzing of the Supreme Court in the play . . . It might be fun to poll the Roosevelt family to see how much they agree on things.

Civil Service Held Injured By New Deal

Roosevelt Gives 'Lip Service,' Says Rep. Edith Rogers.

While President Roosevelt has given "lip service" to promotion of the civil service system, Postmaster General James A. Farley has been "achieving a better and bigger political bureaucracy based on the spoils system," Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, charged yesterday in the House.

"Mr. Farley has performed without rebuke or remonstrance from President Roosevelt," she said, "the political acts of sabotage which have been steadily undermining the civil service, which for more than half a century Democratic and Republican executives and Congresses alike have been earnestly striving to build up."

Mrs. Rogers assailed the McKellar patronage bill designed to restore the selection of first, second and third class postmasters to members of Congress.

To support her charge that the merit system had suffered under the Roosevelt Administration, Mrs. Rogers produced figures to show that while the number of Federal employes increased by 278,177 from 1933 to 1937, only 64,800, or 23.3 per cent, were placed under civil service.

Prior to March, 1933, she said, the percentage of Federal employes under civil service rose from 10.5 per cent in 1884 to 82.9 per cent just before the advent of the New Deal.

In refutation of claims that the emergency nature of many of the New Deal agencies precluded the possibility of placing them in the merit system, Mrs. Rogers cited the record of Woodrow Wilson. Even during the World War, she said, he maintained the civil service so well that on Armistice Day, 1918, 70 per cent of the 917,760 civilian Government employes were so classified.

Farley, she said, "has been building up his Nation-wide political machine at the expense of the most important single fundamental agency of modern scientific government—the civil service."

Ruhland Asks 400 Tuberculosis Beds

Speaking at a dinner given in his honor by the District Podiatry Society at the Mayower Hotel last night, Health Officer George C. Ruhland said that according to recommended standards, the District is lacking more than 400 beds for use of tuberculosis patients.

Dr. Ruhland told podiatrists that the problem of guarding public health today is essentially one of prevention, especially of tuberculosis, which, he said, is one of the diseases which the health department fights most to control.

Other speakers were Dr. John H. Trinder and Representative Leslie C. Arends (Republican), of Illinois. Toastmaster was Dr. A. Owen Penney, while Dr. Arne M. Mattson, D. Charles Conrad and Dr. Elliott C. Schutz were in charge of arrangements and publicity.

Senate Confirms 2 Appeals Judges

The Senate yesterday confirmed two appointees to the United States Court of Appeals of the District and Judge John P. McMahon of Police Court.

The appellate court justices are Representative Fred Vinson, of Kentucky, and Henry W. Edgerton, Cornell law teacher.

The Senate also confirmed the appointment of Joseph R. Jackson, of New York, associate judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals.

Alaska Platinum Mine Expected To Yield 1-10 of World Supply

Deposits Discovered 11 Years Ago Exploited With RFC Funds.

A fabulously rich Alaskan platinum mine, newly exploited with aid of RFC funds, will soon be supplying a tenth of the world's annual yield, predicted Dr. J. B. Mertie, jr., of the Geological Survey, yesterday.

Although platinum deposits at Goodnews Bay, in a remote corner of southwestern Alaska, were discovered 11 years ago, a modern edition of an old-time mining rush developed at the scene only last summer, Mertie stated.

But the prospectors of 1937 didn't struggle through with dog teams; they flew in by airplane. And instead of setting up a rough and tumble mining camp of the Golden Nineties, Mertie said they founded a new town more peaceful than Washington.

Platinum production on Goodnews Bay is carried on by two companies, one of which just purchased a huge bucket dredge with RFC funds, Mertie said. With this modern equipment, a 4,000 to 5,000 ounce output will be increased next year to 40,000 ounces, valued at over $2,000,000.

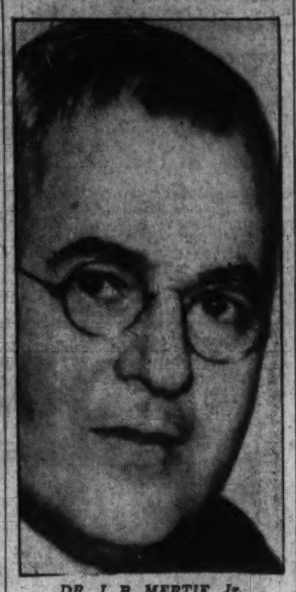
"The independent miner is more and more giving way to large-scale machinery," Mertie said. "At Goodnews Bay, for example, the individual prospectors have to a large extent leased or sold their claims to the companies. The platinum deposits are about 20 feet deep, so men working alone couldn't get very far."

Dr. Mertie, who recently returned to Washington from his twenty-seventh summer making geological surveys for the United States Government in Alaska, noted the passing of primitive "gold rush" days.

"Except for local use, dog teams are 'peluk'—that's Eskimo for 'all gone,'" he said, "It's hard to find any white man in Alaska who hasn't traveled by plane."

"Diesel power, increased price of gold and improved methods are making large-scale mining profitable now," Mertie declared.

Dr. Mertie ought to know, for he has traveled through nearly every section of Alaska in his 27 years' acquaintance with the country. Mertie's principal field is geology, but with topographers he has filled out many a blank space on the map of Alaska. "There are many more to fill," he added.



DR. J. B. MERTIE, Jr.

"Although the towns and settlements are more orderly than those in America, Alaska becomes a primitive land as soon as you get away from centers of population," he said. Several years ago, Mertie, Gerald Fitzgerald, of the Survey, and seven companions made a three-month expedition through northern Alaska without seeing another man.

Mertie has been endangered by forest fires and boat wrecks and other "normal" hazards of life in Alaska, and, as for bears—"well," he said, "they offer less danger than crossing the street in Washington."

Preliminary results of Mertie's investigations in the Goodnews Bay region will be presented before the Society of Economic Geologists, meeting here December 28 in conjunction with he fiftieth annual conference of the Geological Society of America.

Divine Desire For Surrender AdventistTopic

The Rev. F. M. Wilcox Discusses Joys of Stewardship.

"The call of God today is for full surrender, for complete consecration, the dedication to the Lord of everything we have," declared the Rev. F. M. Wilcox, editor of the Review and Herald, the denominational organ, in the week of prayer reading given in all Seventh-Day Adventist churches last night.

Speaking on "The Joy of Stewardship in View of Our Lord's Return," the Rev. Mr. Wilcox asserted that "stewardship pertains not alone to the preaching of the Bible, but to every phase of ministry to Christ our Lord."

"As the herald of the cross finds his greatest joy in soul-saving service, so may the one who gives of his means to support the ministry," he continued. He said stewardship includes missionaries who go abroad, preachers who stay at home, parents who give their children to help advance the gospel, and help given to the poor, sick and afflicted.

"When we appreciate in greater fullness the sacrifice of Christ the Lord, when we realize the cost of our salvation in the death of the only begotten Son of God we shall feel, as never before, that all we have and are belongs Him. The spirit of Pentecostal sacrifice should fill our hearts, and like the early apostles, we should count our possessions as not being our own, but as belonging to the Lord, and to His work, to be surrendered as His spirit shall direct."

The reading for today will be by the Rev. Alfred W. Peterson.

Jewish Position In Holy Land Called Strong

Jews Equal Arabs in Population, Authority Tells Zionist Group.

Charging that an honest census would reveal as many Jews as Arabs within the mandate, Bernard Berger, of Philadelphia, last night told a meeting of the Washington Zionist District that the Jewish position in Palestine is far stronger than generally realized in this country.

Berger put both the Jewish and Arab populations of Palestine at approximately half a million and said, "The British estimate of a million Arabs is ridiculous."

Describing newspaper accounts of a united Arab front throughout the Near East as pure fiction, Berger stated that Moslem leaders in Egypt, Syria and Trans-Jordania had assured him they had no sympathy with outrages against the Jews in Palestine.

Arab land-owners and professional men in the cities have supported the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem in his campaign of terrorism, Berger contended, but otherwise anti-Jewish activities have very limited support among the Arabs. The Grand Mufti, he said, has carried on his activities with Moslem religious funds and Italian munitions.

He described Jewish efforts to develop the resources of Palestine as highly beneficial to the Arabs and predicted that this fact would be generally appreciated as the level of Arab culture was raised.

Born in Jerusalem, Berger is now a contributing editor to the Jewish World, of Philadelphia, and has recently returned from a tour of the Near East.

Citizens Seek Ban on Tug In Anacostia

Ask Closing of Drawbridge When Traffic Is at Peak.

The tugboat Albemarle, with her tall smokestack and towering mast, chugged back into public attention last night at the meeting of the Congress Heights Citizens' Association, when members adopted a resolution asking Commissioners to close the Anacostia Drawbridge during morning and evening rush hours.

It seems the tug, engaged in dredging activities, recently has been puffing past the bridge just as traffic is heaviest.

Last August the Albemarle created a stir when it held up motorists daily on Arlington Memorial and highway bridges when the draws had to be opened to permit her to pass.

But the United States Engineer's Office at that time ruled that nothing could be done about it, for the Albemarle is a transient vessel.

The association also went on record as urging an increased appropriation for Gallinger Hospital, and opposing conversion of the old Tuberculosis Hospital into an addition for Gallinger.

Action of the Smoke Regulation Commission in causing erection of an "excessive" stack on the new theater at Nichols avenue and Portland street southeast was criticized by the association.

Chairman named to the various committees included Benson Taylor, law and legislation; Walter L. Cooper, sewers and water; Frazier White, streets and sidewalks; Joseph Kelly, lighting; Mrs. Ida Marine, schools and playgrounds; Miss C. Young, public utilities and zoning, and Mrs. E. J. Read, entertainment.

The Washingtonians.

A resolution urging Congress to appropriate funds for improvement of Gallinger Hospital was adopted last night by the Washingtonians, civic organization, at a meeting at the Brighton Hotel.

Secretary Roper, guest speaker, predicted that "the city will move forward and its citizens will be accorded such governing necessities as will best safeguard the beauty of this city, which largely belongs to the people of the Nation."

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, in tracing the growth of the school system, went on record as favoring increased vocational education, expanded sports teaching personnel and periodic health examinations for students.

L. A. Carruthers, president of he federatoin, explained the local tax system. The association, besides recommending expansion of Gallinger Hospital, also voted to ask that street car tokens be sold at three for 25 cents.

American U. Park.

A committee to prepare an estimate of cost of construction of a field house in Fort Bayard Park was named last night at a meeting of the American University Park Citizens Association.

H. L. Colman, the association president, at the same time announced that a committee would be designated to make a study of the question of suffrage in the District.

Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Wolfe, 4612 Forty-ninth street northwest, have invited the association to attend a reception celebrating their fiftieth wedding anniversary, January 17, it was announced.

'Plot' Against Sergt. Shimon Is Investigated

Mysterious Caller Asked Him to Appear at Beer Garden.

Police last night were investigating a mysterious telephone call received by Detective Serg. Joseph Shimon, asking him to appear at a beer garden in Northwest Washington.

They suspected the call was part of a "plot" to put Shimon "on the spot" for his part in the gun fight that ended in the death of "Cutty" Williams, notorious safe cracker, Sunday night.

Shimon, detectives revealed, received the call Monday night as he sat in his office.

"Meet me and I'll have some important news for you," the voice said, naming the beer garden and the table at which Shimon was to sit.

Shimon went to the place at the appoined time, while police, under Cap. Ira Keck, surrounded the place. The man who had called anonymously over the telephone never appeared.

One theory police were investigating was that the call came from a figure in Washington's underworld, believed to have been cut off from dope dispensed by Williams.

Meanwhile Keck announced that a special search in Philadelphia and Baltimore for James Steele, said to have been Williams' partner in crime, was requested. Williams is under indictment for a safe-cracking job in Philadelphia, and is free on $10,000 bond.

Air-Condition License Tests Here Predicted

Health Engineer Cites Peril to Public in Improper Work.

District air-conditioning operators may be required to submit to a test for a license, Claude F. Browning, a sanitary engineer of the Health Department, predicted yesterday.

Regulation of the temperature in the District's public meeting places could be more efficiently supervised if the operators of the air-conditioning equipment were better trained, Browning stated.

The Health Department subdivision began an investigation last March involving the effects of air-conditioning. To date, of the 300 buildings studied, Browning said not more than three operators therein "could demonstrate thorough knowledge of his work."

Two proposals have been submitted to local air-conditioning manufacturers and representatives by the Health Department. The first would establish a school to train air-conditioning operators, and the second would ask that all operators be required to take a test for a license.

The study taken this past summer revealed that in many cases plants maintained a temperature which was too far below the temperature on the outside thus endangering the health of the patrons. On the other hand, the investigation disclosed just the opposite in winter. Many were heated to the extent that the air was too dry.

Misconduct Here Is Laid To Lawyers

Bondsmen Also to Be Cited in Charges Ordered by Judges.

Unethical conduct charges against police court attorneys and bondsmen will be filed "as soon as possible" by a special investigating committee of the Bar Association, acting on instructions received yesterday from the four police judges.

A new set of court rules, drawn up by the committee in collaboration with the judges, may be announced in seven weeks, Presiding Judge John P. McMahon said.

Headed by Austin F. Canfield, the committee yesterday was requested "to present charges and have citations issued against certain attorneys and bondsmen for alleged unprofessional conduct, irregularities and violations of rules of court," Judge McMahon said. Suspension or disbarment may follow.

Although many of the complaints received by the committee since its appointment last spring were "thoroughly unjustified," Canfield told The Post last night that "a certain number of cases" seemed worth reporting to the court. It is believed that the conduct of more than 30 attorneys and bondsmen has been investigated.

Charges are understood to involve misrepresentation of cases to the court, taking money from potential clients on false pretenses, improper action of bondsmen and other unethical practices.

Canfield stated that his group would recommend a standing committee, appointed by the court, to hear complaints and conduct independent investigations of alleged malpractices.

The actions of a few unscrupulous persons "must not bring the whole bar into obloquy," Canfield said last night. "In the interests of the public and of justice, somebody ought to hear complaints of this sort, and, if justified, take action on them. Our bar is mindful that it has to be kept on a high plane."

Referring to the revision of rules as "one big job," Canfield stated that the study involves all regulations governing practice in court.

Canfield's committee includes William E. Gallagher, T. Edward O'Connell, George Monk and Franklyn Yasmer.

Souvenirs and Mementoes of Gala Events Reported by Veteran Lovers of Drama; More of Valerie Bergere's "Come-Back;" "Man in Barn" Unearths Contacts With Lincoln's Assassination; Deeter Comes to Town; Notes of Theater and Its People.

MANY interesting reactions to the columns devoted to the theater in The Post's recent sixtieth anniversary edition have been communicated to this department by readers who make clear that interest in the living drama has not died in the hearts of veteran playgoers. Two of them may be cited as perhaps typical of the whole.

BELL.

A gentleman who would prefer that his name be not used communicates the information by telephone that he was present in the audience on the night of the dedication of Albaugh's Grand Opera House—later known as Albaugh's Opera House, P. B. Chase's Theater and Poli's—when President Chester A. Arthur and White House party occupied a box, and still has his program of that gala occasion in 1884. The dedicatory attraction, it may be recalled, was Emma Abbott in Rossini's "Semiramide." The program is still in a state of excellent preservation by reason of the fact that it was printed on silk.

From Miss Esther Lee Warner, 617 Washington avenue, Hagerstown, Md., and 514 Cathedral street, Baltimore, comes a letter stating in part as follows:

Dear Mr. Bell: The photograph of Madame Sarah Bernhardt published in the anniversary issue of The Post and the accompanying article on "Frou-Frou" will be added to my collection of photographs and articles pertaining to the Divine Sarah—which is unique, I think, in that it was started this year, 1937, with a gift of her "Memories of My Life," a rare and beautiful book . . . Do you know that in the Enoch Pratt Library, Baltimore, the index file lists 13 books under the name, "Sarah Bernhardt?" And her book, "The Art of the Theater," which was very near her heart and written, some understand, shortly before her death, in this writer's humble opinion, will be read by those of each succeeding generation interested in the theater. Very truly yours, (signed) ESTHER LEE WARNER."

It is pleasant to know that a necessarily condensed and sketchy resume of 60 years of the theater in Washington should have awakened fragrant memories in the minds and hearts of the faithful. I also am grateful for the interesting data so many have taken the trouble to submit out of sheer love of the playhouse.

Speaking of reminiscences, it is Roland Robbins, manager of the Trans-Lux Theater and formerly manager of B. F. Keith's over a period of 13 years, who drops by the desk to express his interest in a recent reference here to Valerie Bergere, former stage actress and vaudeville star, who appeared in the role of Bette Davis' maid in "It's Love I'm After," in which Leslie Howard was co-starred on the screen. Miss Bergere, says Mr. Robbins, was one of the most delightful ladies who ever played his theater in the old era of the two-a-day. Falling upon evil days in the theater in which she had grown up, Miss Bergere only now is experiencing something of a rejuvenation of spirit in the films, having also appeared recently in a short-reel subject with Edgar Bergen and that incorrigible blockhead, Charlie McCarthy. What is not generally known is that Miss Bergere also is a scientist of recognized attainment, who, thus, has resources away from the footlights and the Kliegs. For this bit of news you may thank Mr. Robbins, who also reports, incidentally, that his Fourteenth street house is enjoying bumper business with an unusually strong succession of short-reel programs. This week, he says, will be a knockout, including among its features Paramount's pictorial recapitulation of the highlights of 1937, in which are brought back glimpses of the Hindenburg disaster, the coronation and other spectacular events.

So the powers-that-be have decided that "Stage Door" will not be "drained dry" by being kept on the screen at RKO-Keith's until Christmas Day, after all. A week from today, Friday, December 17, Republic's musical production of "Manhattan Merry-Go-Round," with Phil Regan and Ann Dvorak, will be sandwiched in between "Stage Door" and Lily Pons' "Hitting a New High," which still is scheduled to open on Christmas.

From the office of Pooh-Bah Frank La Falce—and, one suspects, the typewriter of Master Dan Terrell—of the Warner Brothers' local organization, comes the hint that in "Sh! The Octopus," co-featuring Hugh Herbert and Allen Jenkins, the Capital will encounter a mystery-farce that makes no sense whatever. The bulletin goes on to say that "Every once in a while some makers of movies throw away all the elements of common sense, dignity, reasonableness and decorum and turn out a picture which is the world's daffiest comedy. Such an occasion arose when the Warners decided to make the Metropolitan's current feature." To paraphrase Judy's classic remark to Mr. Whiteman, "You're telling I, Mr. D. T.?"

There was talk for a minute of the possibility of the Washington Civic Theater's transferring its activities from the Wardman Park Theater to the darkened National for the impending production of Andre Obey's play of "Noah," but nothing seems to have come of that. "Noah" will open next Wednesday at Wardman, as originally announced. Tickets now are on sale in the lobby of the Raleigh Hotel for the engagement which will continue through Saturday, December 18, with a special Saturday matinee.

As was anticipated in this space yesterday, lively interest is being taken in "The Man in the Barn," M-G-M's one-reel dramalet raising new doubts as to the ultimate fate of John Wilkes Booth, the assassin of President Lincoln. Mrs. Nellie Lyman Gore, 4422 Garfield street, is the granddaughter of Charles Lyman, then associated with the dead letter department of the Postoffice, who was present in Ford's Theater the night Lincoln was shot. Mrs. Walter F. Gideon, 804 Filmore street, discloses that while no relative of hers was present in the theater on that tragic night, her mother's bonnet was. A certain Mrs. Brown, who lived in the same boarding house with Mrs. Gideon's mother, Georgia W. Prescott, borrowed Miss Prescott's hat to wear to the performance of "Our American Cousin." Mrs. Brown came running home in a state of virtual hysterics and screamed so loudly that Mr. Prescott was sure there must be burglars about. The bonnett was lost in the excitement and never was found. Both Mrs. Gore and Mrs. Gideon will be present at Loew's Palace tonight as guests of the management.

• • • •

Tonight at 8:30, at Armstrong High School, Jasper Deeter will present his famous Hedgerow Theater Company in "Candida." Mr. Deeter, under whose tutelage Ann Harding, Morris Carnovsky, Libby Holman and numerous other noted players got their starts, directed the production and will appear in the cast.

Picture Realism Aided at Oxford

An authentic touch was added to the Oxford quadrangle set of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer British Studios' "A Yank at Oxford" when extras, mostly London medical students appearing as "undergraduates," started scratching their initials in the stonework. Far from frowning on this marring of the architecture, Director Jack Conway even encouraged it, he, Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan and various other players adding their initials, too.

Largest Taxpayer.

Franciska Gaal, who co-stars with Fredric March in "The Buccaneer," is Hungary's largest income-tax payer, but says her European salary, on which the tax is paid, is "buttons" compared to most Hollywood salaries.

Successful Team.

Wesley Ruggles, ace producer-director, and Claude Binyon, the writer, have worked together on seven hit pictures, the latest of which is "True Confession," starring Carole Lombard.

Actor Marksmen Shoot Tin Cans

The "Benefits Forgot" Gun Club has a most unusual distinction.

"We are probably the worst shots ever to belong to one club," chortled James Stewart, president. "And I head the list as the worst."

After practicing for three weeks at Lake Arrowhead, where Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Benefits Forgot" company is on location, Walter Huston was the only member to hit the target.

"When not working we often ride up to Strawberry Peak, one of the highest mountains in the vicinity," explained Stewart, "for target practice."

A tin can placed atop a pole at the edge of the peak, which is 6,000 feet above sea level, was their target.

Standing 20 paces away Huston, Stewart, Charles Coburn, Charley Grapewin, Charles Peck and Ann Rutherford shot tirelessly at the elusive can, and the only one to dent it, so far, is Huston, "who is a very lucky shot," according to the other members.

RKO-Keith's

Converted from a diffused and "double-barreled" stage play into a direct and emotionally powerful drama of stage aspirations, successes, failures and numbing tragedy, the film version of "Stage Door" has vindicated the comprehensive revisions in script which it reveals by achieving a major popular success at RKO-Keith's Theater.

Although "Stage Door" has been given greater directness and dramatic vigor than the original George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber original could boast, the camera adaptation has sacrificed nothing of its predecessor's hilarious comedy. The girls living in Mrs. Orcutt's "Footlights Club," in the heart of New York's theatrical district, continue to bandy "wisecracks" about with a brittle asperity that keeps an audience in high good humor until the tragic closing episodes of the play sober them into consciousness that here is vital and vibrant drama at last showing through th froth.

In the intensely gripping climax of the play, Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Andrea Leeds prove themselves serious actresses of the first water. They portray their roles with honest and moving sincerity. In the lighter moments of the action Adolphe Menjou, Constance Collier and a host of others contribute no less generously. The sum total of their work makes an impressive entry on the credit side of the play's ledger.

"The March of Time," always an arresting documentary study of timely topics, is the companion attraction on the Keith bill that has won such high acclaim from both the critical fraternity of this and other cities and from the public. Other short-reel subjects and the current issue of the Pathe News add further weight to the argument that this is a program no judicious amusement-seeker should permit himself to miss. N. B. B.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Dec. 9.

DEFEAT: The George S. Kaufmans, who have a country home at Doylestown, Pa., had a dinner date last week-end at the Piperidgeville home of Alan Campbell and Dorothy Parker, 13 miles away. The Kaufmans couldn't attend, and so, because the Campbells have no phone, they phoned Publisher Harold Guinzburg in New York, who had been invited to the dinner, and asked him to convey regrets . . . "We're not going," Guinzburg stated, "but Lillian Hellman has been invited. Phone her and tell her we can't come, either" . . . They phoned Miss Hellman in New York. She wasn't home, and so the Kaufmans left the message with her maid. But the Campbells never got the word—for Miss Hellman didn't go.

• • • • •

TURMOIL: The press book for the Fred Waring film, "Varsity Show," containing advice on how to publicize the picture locally, was sent out to exhibitors throughout the country this week. "Contact your local radio stations," was the advice, "and have them play Fred Waring's records throughout the run of the picture." . . . If that advice is followed, the radio stations will pay heavy damages—because Mr. Waring was the plaintiff in a number of suits which resulted in a ruling prohibiting radio stations from playing his recordings.

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: The next issue of Life will include some uncensored photos of the Dominican-Haitian border pogroms in which 1,000 natives allegedly were slain. Rex Hardy, jr., took those photos . . . When he entered the country he declared only four cameras, although he had a fifth one—a Leica. He and Alexander King, of the editorial staff, convinced the generals that they wished only to photograph the mountains. And so, under guard, they set up one camera, while the other three were deposited with the officials . . . The photos were taken, the guards took the camera and marched the duo back to town—marched in front of them, and so couldn't see Hardy, with his undeclared Leica, taking the uncensored pictures.

• • • •

PRIDE: During the intermission at the premiere of "Hooray for What," a venerable lady went backstage, tried to see Ed Wynn but was stopped. She therefore seated herself in the wings and remained there until the curtain had descended. The veteran Wynn, who single-handedly was responsible for the excellent reviews and the show's success, walked offstage and spied the gray-haired lady—his mother. "Ma! Ma!" he shouted, "Wasn't I the best in the show tonight?"

• • • •

ROMANCE: Last week Deems Taylor auditioned his new opera for the Metropolitan officials. Edward Johnson, head of the Met., now is willing to accept the opera, but here's the hitch: Taylor demands that Collette D'Arville be assigned the leading role—"or else." And Johnson prefers to accept the "or else" part of the ultimatum.

• • • •

DEFEAT: W. P. Lipscomb, who worked in Hollywood for Zanuck and Paramount, now is appearing in London in the leading role of his own play, "Ninety Sail." He stepped into the part at the last minute when the star was stricken . . . At the rehearsal of this Samuel Pepys play Lipscomb, portraying Charles II, was asked: "Sire, will you open Parliament?" . . . "Yeah," was the answer he gave—which excited the Britishers, who were alarmed at a modern Americanism emanating from one in ancient regal costume . . . Lipscomb apologized and promised to correct this on opening night . . . Correct it he did, except in the second act when he, as Charles II, reached down into the folds of his royal robe and drew forth—a package of Chesterfields!

• • • •

CHATTER: Elisabeth Bergner will appear in "St. Joan" in Rome, with Metro and George Bernard Shaw as co-producers . . . Sonja Henie contributed $500 to the B'klyn Eagle Strike Fund . . . Dan Healy, mayor of B'way, opens at the Yacht Club tomorrow . . . John L. Lewis will plague Jersey City's Hague with annoying legal moves, every three days for the next two months . . . Sidney Howard leaves this week on a 20,000-mile air jaunt, to get material for the new Goldwyn picture he'll write, "Transatlantic Flight."

• • • •

DISCOVERY: The newspapers this week announced the loss of a carrier-pigeon bearing a Marcus diamond, dispatched to the office of Harper's Bazaar magazine . . . Marcus inserted a "Lost" ad in the Times yesterday . . . As a matter of truth, the pigeon can be found at St. Patrick's Cathedral nearby. As soon as it left the Marcus building at Fifth avenue, it spied the Cathedral pigeons and joined them. If the jewelers can distinguish their diamond-bearing pigeon from the rest and get it down to earth, they'll recover the gem.

• • • •

ENTERPRISE: A blueblood lady, who owns a country estate near one of the military encampments, phoned the commandant. She stated that there was an overabundance of ladies present at the party she was giving and would the commandant please send eight of his men to join the party—gentlemen who were not of the non-Aryan class . . . A half hour later four Filipino and four Chinese soldiers appeared . . . "There must be some mistake," the hostess protested . . . "There couldn't be," one of the soldiers replied. "Our Col. Lefkowitz never makes mistakes."

Golden Gown Is Ideal for Xmas

Probably the most beautiful evening gown in Hollywood at this moment is the gold lame sheath Claudette Colbert is wearing in a scene for "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." Designed by Travis Banton, along with about 30 other modern costumes, this evening creation hits a new high in fashion glamour. The material is sprinkled with tiny gold sequins, and the dress is draped and shirred into a seductive silhouette which stresses a slight oriental feeling. The straps are wide pieces of the lame, crushed to produce a square decolletage. Ruby and diamond jewelry accents are added to supply color contrast.

Hat Breaker.

Clark Gable has a stand-in who wears Gable's new hats for a week, to break them in.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Dec. 9.—Yesterday I saw two "short subjects" previewed. In my opinion, they are going to start a new Hollywood "cycle"—and I think you will welcome them. Photographed—and photographed unusually well—in technicolor, they depict dramatic incidents in the history of the United States. The producer informs me that they are the first of a series. One concerns the purchase of the Louisiana Territory; the other is based on Edward Everett Hale's story, "The Man Without a Country."

• • • •

It looks to me as though Hollywood, at long last, is beginning to credit theatergoers with intelligence—to realize that there is a great potential market for something other than the gooey pap that has been served up for so many years on the screen. Probably phenomenal success of "The March of Time" has had much to do with it. That reel, according to exhibitors' reports, draws people to the theaters in droves. Ever since its first release I have been wondering why the great studios, with their elaborate equipment and tremendous research facilities, did not see the light.

• • • •

I think Hollywood has always over-emphasized the love story. Studios have taken great classics, stories that have been the favorites of millions for generations, and re-written them in order to give the Taylors a chance to clinch with the Garbos. I wonder how many of you agree with me that a kiss is not necessarily the foundation for all drama.

• • • •

Played golf with Crooner Crosby today—our first game since he was invested with an honorary Ph. D. by Gonzaga University. Between nines, in the clubhouse, we encountered an old friend of mine, a brilliant scholar who is now professor of psychology at one of the local colleges. I introduced the Groaner as Dr. Crosby and jestingly remarked that two eminent Ph. D.'s should find a lot in common. The professor has a sense of humor. "Dr. Crosby," he grinned. "I envy you when I think of the seven years' work I could have saved had I been able to put a love song over the boops."

• • • •

Pandemonium on the Warner Brothers lot this morning. Rex, one of Hollywood's dog stars, was working on an open set when in trooped a squadron of visitors. One of the ladies had succumbed to the charms of "Alicia," the studio cat, and arrived with puss cradled in her arms. Rex caught sight of her—and the battle was on. Thirty minutes later, with the bedlam at last quieted and Rex's throbbing nerves soothed enough to keep him in camera range, shooting was resumed. The assistant director, who has a flair for mathematics, did a bit of rough estimation. At a dollar a cat, the studio could have ransomed all the pussies in the city pound for the cost of the delay.

• • • •

Speaking of dogs, Helen Vinson's Scotty has achieved considerable fame since his mistress visited the world's tallest tree on a recent vacation tour of northern California.

• • • •

Every time I hear a screen star beef and burn about Hollywood's army of autograph collectors, I have a quiet chuckle and remember that ancient adage about the pot calling the kettle black. Most movie celebrities are, themselves, autograph hunters de luxe. Grace Moore's piano groans under its load of signed autographs—European royalty, American diplomats and politicians, famous composers. Lily Pons has two pianos, similarly loaded. Joan Crawford's pride and joy is her autograph book, with its scribblings by famous personages. Apparently it takes more than stardom to change human nature and destroy the desire to worship heroes.

Versatile.

Fur and Tweed Do Double Duty

Frances Dee, now starring opposite Joel McCrea in "Wells-Fargo," has an interesting winter warp this season. Over her tailored daytime clothes, Miss Dee is wearing a circular cape of mutria lined in blue tweed. With a certain blue tweed week-end suit, this cape may be reversed, with the fur side serving as a lining. There is a cap of mutria, cut in peasant lines, which may be worn back of the head, and a smart bag of blue tweed with the inevitable zipper closing.

Patient Girl.

Laraine Johnson, newly discovered ingenue, who makes her screen debut in "Scandal Street," waited six years before she got a chance in pictures. She spent most of the time playing juvenile roles in a stock company at Long Beach, Calif.

Must Be American.

In "Daughter of Shanghai," Anna May Wong wore many of her own gowns, as she appeared as a Chinese, but in "Dangerous to Know," her second Paramount picture, she will be provided ensemble by the studio wardrobe, as her role demands American clothes.

Ex-Footballer.

David Niven, currently working in the new Ernest Lubitsch production, "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," was a star forward for two years on the Rugby eleven of Sandhurst Military College, England's West Point.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Is There Cure for Man's Tendency to Let Others Pay When Out on Foursome Parties?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Maybe this is more than friendship and therefore the reason I am concerned about it, but I have a gentleman friend who has so many admirable qualities and who is such charming company that it seems a shame to let one bad habit spoil our happy association. He has been my escort on countless occasions the past year and has always taken me to nice places.

• • • •

When we are alone together he is always generous with his money, but if another couple is along he almost invariably defaults on his share of the cab fare, tips, liquor, etc. It's the sort of thing other young men won't put up with for long, and eventually he will be quietly but firmly dropped. I hate to stand by and see him lose out with his friends. It seems so unnecessary, but what can I do?

DISTRESSED.

DEAR DISTRESSED: A young woman of my acquaintance who is skillful in making her men friends toe the mark with regard to agreeable social conduct, has a way of inviting discussion of disappointing habits by saying: "Let's have a truth party. Tell me what there is about me you would change if you could, and I'll tell you about yourself." Usually the man can be induced to offer some suggestions for improvement, whereupon she tells him, with friendly directness, her bill of complaint against him. I can't promise it won't offend your beau—the majority of men find it difficult to digest comment of a critical kind, even when warranted and tactfully offered—but at least it's one way of bringing a delicate subject into the open.

• • • •

Also, a young bride I know, married to a man who is the salt of the earth and whom she recognizes and loves as such, is a perfectionist in the matter of social manners and a stickler for finer points which the average man is apt to ignore. Gradually she is polishing her husband into her concept of a modern Chesterfield. She tells me she does it by biding here time until he is in his most receptive mood, when she guides the conversation into a discussion of her own and other persons' idiosyncrasies. She creates opportunity for emphasizing, in an indirect and seemingly most casual way, those aspects of behavior which invest certain individuals with charm and distinction. Whether her husband recognizes this sugar-coated medicine for what it is, she doesn't know; but she says he seems to get the point and patterns his manner accordingly.

• • • •

Whether your friend will respond constructively to either the direct or indirect approach is problematic. Close-fistedness in money matters is not apt to be a matter of thoughtlessness, to be corrected simply by calling the defaulting person's attention to the fact. It is a deep-rooted quirk of character or personality, which is stronger than the individual's ability consciously to control his actions. I dare say it is an intuitive recognition of this obscure abnormality of personality which causes persons of normally generous, fair-sharing impulses to avoid the offender like poison. There is a taint of unwholesomeness about such a person; he is one who, on intimate acquaintance, would very likely reveal other concomitant peculiarities.

• • • •

At heart, I suppose, this man is completely selfish. He is willing to spend on you, when with you, for the reason that he derives pleasure from your society and because he gets a glow of self-satisfaction in impressing you with his generosity (and beware of the person who is conscious of being generous). If he were essentially unselfish, he would automatically rise to any occasion where bills were to be paid and he had the money with which to pay them, although, as a responsible-minded person, he wouldn't override a share-and-share-alike accounting afterward (beware, also, of the four-flusher who insists on claiming all the checks, refusing everybody's offer to contribute his bit).

• • • •

Do what you can to call this man's attention to the manner wherein he offends your sense of social rectitude, and whereby he stands to lose his friends. But take care that you don't fall so deeply in love with him that you feel you cannot live without him. It is my belief that he would always be the same thorn in your side that he is today, as far as his embarrassing tendency to sponge is concerned. M. H.

Question of Decorum.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It was a very great misfortune to lose my mother some weeks ago. The death was sudden and unexpected, but not violent. I had already purchased my Christmast gifts for the family and for friends and had my cards engraved. What is the proper thing to do now, from a conventional point of view? Should I send the cards, or omit them this year? What should I do about sending gifts? I live at home with the family and our own Christmas will naturally be a quiet one. Thanking you for a prompt reply, I am, sincerely yours, R. E. R.

• • • •

DEAR R. E. R.: So far as I know, twentieth century society has established no formal rule to follow in such a situation as yours. However, among civilized persons it has become the hallmar of aristocracy to meet bereavement with all possible composure, and to refrain, insofar as possible, from visiting one's sense of sorrow on intimate friends. With this standard of behavior in mind, I see no reason why you shouldn't send the gifts as planned, and the cards as well, providing they extend the season's greetings in conventional phases or possibly express a religious sentiment. You wouldn't want to use them, of course, if they were facetious or extravagantly original in content and design. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

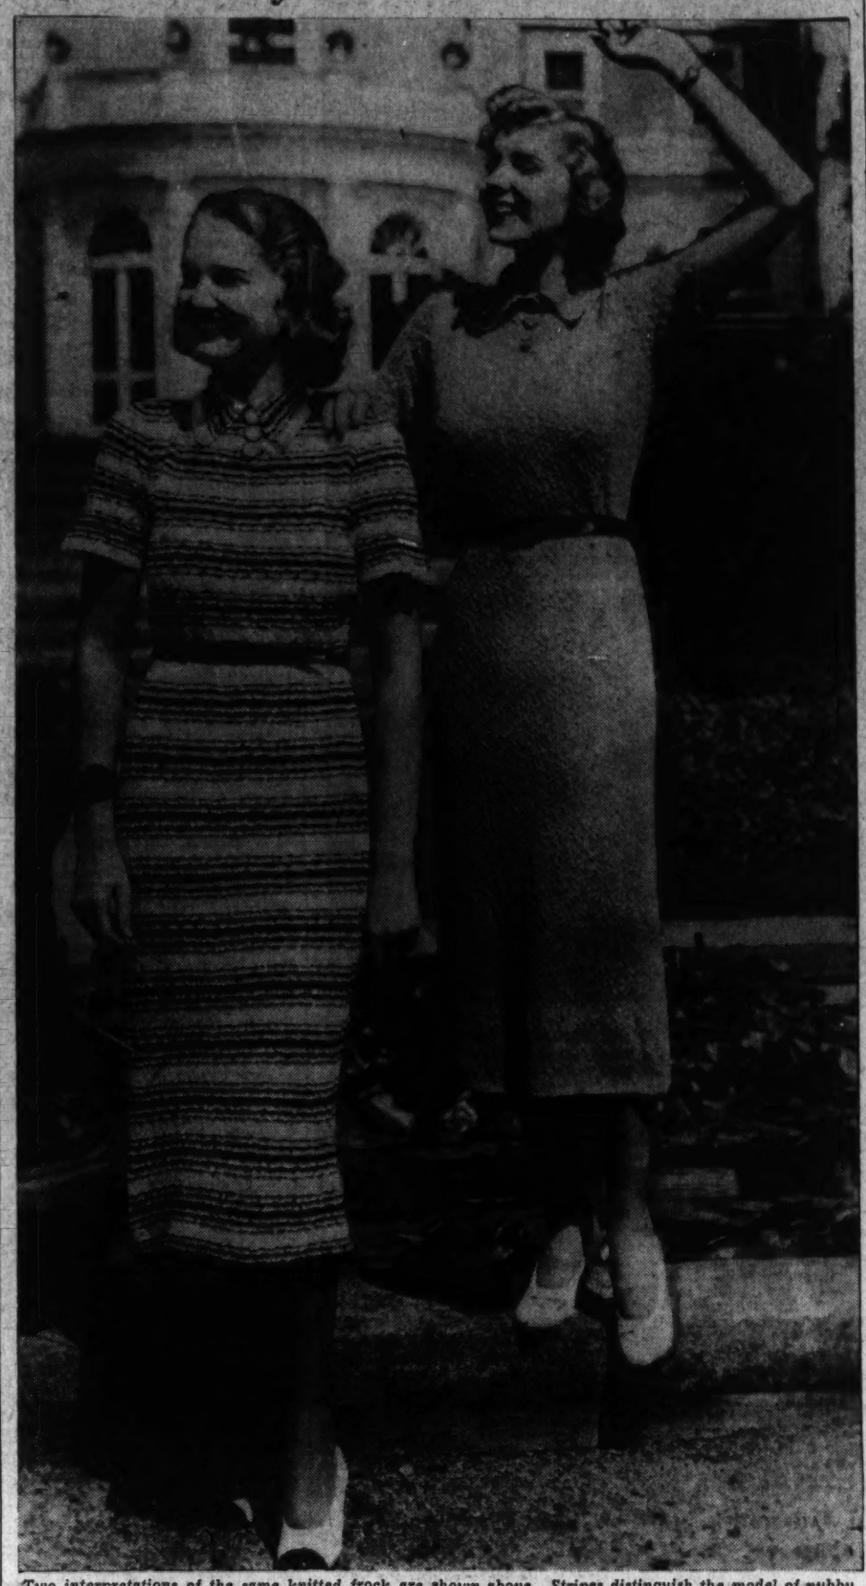
Knits for North or South



Two interpretations of the same knitted frock are shown above. Stripes distinguish the model of nubby yarn (left) in black and white; spray green, cruise blue, or cherry red, would be ideal for the solid-color frock (right). Note the small tailored collar and contrasting buttons with matching belt. For knitting directions No. 4201 send 3-cent stamp to Post Fashion Editor.

Knitted Clothes Prove Ideal For 'North-South' Costumes

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

SYNONYMOUS with cruises and Southern resorts are knitted clothes. Since any of the current styles may be interpreted in either cotton, woolen, or combination yarns, they are also ideal "North-or-South" costumes. The casual knit frock can be made suitable to wear to sport events, cocktails, shopping or informal dinners. It is all done with accessories and a knitted frock of simple lines and chic styling.

Taking a cue from the silks, rayons and cottons, knits are appearing with novelty buttons and belts as smart decorative trimming. Knits in the clever nubby yarns are a grand medium for showing off your massive-looking sports jewelry. The same frock in yarn of silk and cotton is an effective foil for pearls and silly little hats with long flowing veils.

With a simple knitted frock of neutral tones, there are endless possibilities for changing the character of the ensemble; the old basic-dress idea applied to cruise and resort wardrobes. This is a practical idea from the standpoint of traveling light—less costumes are needed—and knits also pack well, being wrinkle-proof.

Knits are a smart background for the colorful sports and beach-type shoes now being exploited for resort wear and for next spring and summer. A gayly striped or patterned knit frock would be striking accented with the new thick-soled cubits which are creating so much comment in the fashion world. Many of the knitted frocks have their accompanying boleros. According to Schiaparelli, who recently arrived from Paris, boleros are going to be more important than ever in the spring mode. A timely tip to ambitious knitters!

Frappe is the newest cruise yarn—it has a delightful texture which lends itself well to smart stylings, will stand frequent washings and has been thoroughly texted for blocking. Aside from the conventional color tones, a number of new Southern resort shades have made their appearance: Melody pink, mayfair blue, peacock and bali green.

Formal Hats Made In 1914-15 Style

For formal wear, Molyneux is sponsoring the 1914-15 influence in hats, interpreted in stitched silk taffeta models with small, round, thick brims and cylinder-shaped crowns, which are also rather thick and high. An outstanding creation is the same fabric stitched in a lozenge pattern and stuck on canvas; it is trimmed with grosgrain ribbon and an old-fashioned hatpin pierced through the crown. Besides taffetas, Molyneux is using quite a lot of grosgrain satin and grosgrain ribbon.

Agnes is working on several turban models in silk jersey for the spring.

Suzy declares she will use a great deal of ribbon trimmings—in satin, silk jersey and grosgrain. She intends to continue her turbans in mousseline de soie for evening wear.

Other modistes are favorably considering silk ribbon trims—in plain, faconne and printed versions, as well as bicolored and multicolored.

Today's HEALTH TALK

Yesterday I pointed out that in the operation of the manifold functions of the different systems of the body there has to be some governing force, something to make the wheels go round. The digestive system converts food into a form suitable for use as energy and tissue; the heart pumps this around in the blood; the different cells take it up; the kidneys and the skin throw off the waste products. But all of these different functions are beautifully correlated so that they do not get in each other's way. They are not beforehand or behind time, and everything works out smoothly.

To a very large extent the business of making all these things work out so well is done by the thyroid gland. We pointed out yesterday its effect upon weight. When its secretion is excessive, the weight loss of the body is rapid, and increased intake of food, even to an excessive extent, does not result in replacement of the weight loss.

Another thing that the thyroid undoubtedly helps to maintain is bodily temperature. All of our functions are carried on best at the exact level of 98.2 degrees F. Our functions do not operate well when we are chilled or when we have fever, and by many intricate processes the body maintains this exact temperature for its own efficiency. People with excessive thyroid secretion are always warm, require less bed clothing and fewer clothes than others, and those with diminished thyroid secretion are always cold. So the thyroid must have something to do with this very important general function of the body.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 9.

WE ARE NOW fighting our way through the most interesting time of the whole year in the bustling, even hopeful, City of New York. Nothing, for thrill and frolic, can tie the furious days between Thanksgiving and Christmas. The same, of course, is true all over the country—it is only more noticeably frantic here because the shopping district is so huge and scattered.

It is no secret that the big merchants here were a bit afraid of the period this year. That market nose-dive, with the resultant brow-furrowing, had them fretting heavily. I am happy to say, however, that the storekeepers are now managing a few smiles as they contemplate their crowded aisles and moving merchandise. Come weal, come woe, somehow the pre-Christmas madness never lets us down. It is just as insane, just as jammed, just as wonderful as ever.

The poor, bored Santa Clauses are doing their best to be nice to the youngsters, even putting up with the usual whisker-tugging. It is noteworthy that the local style in store Santies now runs heavily to old mission-house gentlemen with genuine beavers, thus lessening the chance of disillusionment among the boys and girls who just can't resist giving the beards a hearty yank.

How are you doing with your gift buying? Mine is slow, owing to the rush of big-shot dressmakers to town and my customary insane routine. Of course, the helpmate is easy. A solid-color blue tie and best wishes make him as happy as can be. The old wheeze about horrid Christmas ties bought by the little woman never goes in our family. Martin's toys, of course, are something else. He seems to have everything, practically all broken. Maybe I'll get him a book he can't read.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—That St. Louis girl, Dorothy Fox, is making the Rainbow Room regulars forget about Sheila Barrett, with her dance satires. Dorothy is one of the smartest, cleverest dancers ever to play the town, and seems certain of a brilliant career as a solo artist.

• • • •

I have only just learned that the really Big Moment of the Metropolitan Opera premiere came when Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, acknowledged leader of the Old Guard, dropped her jewel case on the sidewalk and spilled those glittering gewgaws all over the place! What's more, Mrs. V. never noticed the drop of a fortune, and it was not until a kindly bystander scooped them up and returned them that she registered the proper surprise, horror and gratitude.

• • • •

I dared the Hudson breezes the other day to see off a rather unusual shipload on the Queen Mary. The big liner was hip-deep in titles, as well as merely interesting citizens. Ely Culbertson was among them, plagued by reporters because of his approaching divorce from handsome Jo. He actually cried when his two children, Joyce and Bruce, came down to see him off. The prettiest passenger of course, was the British tennis star, Kay Stammers, who has lingered on here for months after the close of the bat-and-ball season.

• • • •

Speaking of the Queen, I never realized what a tough girl she was until the other day when she butted smack into her pier, causing $20,000 worth of damage. And all that happened to the huge canoe was the loss of her forward flagstaff, from which flies the proud naval jack of Hold Hengland. And the passengers, they say, didn't even feel a shock. Maybe the dear old Queen could even fight a draw with an iceberg!

Somehow, as the weather gets colder, flowers get more and more into our eyes—and noses. Irene Hayes, the famed Park avenue florist, has just brought out a new carnation shade, called "Byrhh," after the purplish-red French aperitif. And a big Fifth avenue store has just installed Dorothy Wells, a famous local flower fixer, to teach patrons the secret of her graceful art. But not one of them can help me keep a modest fern alive in my steam heated igloo.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Dancing Now Regarded as Highly Beneficial Slimming Exercise.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WE USED to think of the dance as a series of leaps and bounds and yards of gauze. It was something for schoolgirls and professionals—certainly no business woman would be caught gamboling on the green! Today, however, dancing has a new appeal. It is regarded as a joyous form of exercise which will take 6 inches off the hipline in three months.

Miss Miriah Winslow, one of the leaders in the newer movement in dancing, says that "dancing does everything for the figure that the woman today expects of exercise. It raises and develops the chest, lengthens and slims the waist, slims the hips like magic, molds the thighs, develops the calf, and tapers the ankle."

In her teaching she combines the ballet with modern dancing, because "the ballet teaches precision and balance, while modern dancing gives suppleness." Since dancing dispels nervous tension and stiffness, Miss Winslow recommends it to the business woman as a change from the work routine. Another advantage of dancing is that it exercises all the muscles in harmonized movements that produce habits of grace. Besides all this, it is exhilarating exercise.

Movement Translated.

Here is a ballet movement which Miss Winslow has translated into exercise for you. It is particularly effective in beautifying the thigh and calf.

POSITION: Standing erect, turn the toes slightly out. Have the feet apart.

MOVEMENT: Slowly go into a half-knee bend. Hold, and slowly return to position. Repeat three to six times.

This makes thigh and calf shapely.

POSITION: Sitting on the floor, legs wide apart.

MOVEMENT: Pull the toes toward the insteps until the heels are off the floor. Then let the legs drop back on the floor and shake them until they bounce. This will relax the muscles.

All dancers have tiny waistlines. And why not, when they constantly assume such dance positions as the following:

POSITION: Standing erect, feet apart, arms out at sides.

MOVEMENT: Twist and turn at the waist as you fling the arms to the alternate sides. Keep the hips squarely to the front. This exercise promotes suppleness.

Will Take Six Inches Off the Hipline in Three Months' Time.

Pen Picture of Capital Drawn by Olga Moore

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

What goes on in the Nation's Capital sooner or later finds its way into print—not only in news and gossip columns, but also between book covers and on the smooth pages of the big-slick magazines.

One of the most recent published pen-pictures of Washington society appears in the latest issue of the Country Gentleman. Olga Moore, who lived here when her husband, Dr. Carl F. Arnold, was connected with the Federal Communications Commission, is the author. Entitled "Congress Is Cute," the story appears as fiction but manages to include some spicy philosophy based on fact.

HOPE R. MILLER.

But before you rush for the nearest newsstand, pause for a flashback on the author. After having made an extensive circle of friends here, she and Dr. Arnold left Washington last spring for Laramie, Wyo., where he resumed his duties as dean of the law school, University of Wyoming.

Meanwhile, with a number of literary successes already chalked up to her credit, Miss Moore proceeded to pound out a few pieces on the Washington scene. "Congress Is Cute," however was finished and off to market before she shook the dust of the Capital from her shoes.

Written as letters back home from the wife of a newly-elected Representative, the story contains some piquant passages on Washington. For example: "It is a strange, cautious city. Conversation is tentative and guarded. People show you a wary friendliness. They ask you whom you know. They know Senator Glass and a cousin of Cordell Hull's. They once saw Lady Lindsay at the opera. They were pushed about at a party by Alice Longworth . . . and they have a book autographed by Evalyn Walsh McLean."

Further quote: "It's very dangerous to laugh in Washington. You might cast a doubt on someone's dear importance . . . both the salons and the solons are a little overstuffed."

By way of further establishing the author's identity—if it's necessary at this point—she's the author of the novel, "Wind-Swept," published last year in this country and recently brought out in England. And she's a sister-in-law of Thurman Arnold, who was formerly connected with the Department of Justice, and whose current book, "The Folklore of Capitalism," has the whole town talking.

* * * *

A few days ago, after a hasty perusal of the Social Register for 1938, I mentioned the fact that it is several pages slimmer than its immediate predecessor. A more careful study reveals also that nuptial ties have slipped several notches since last year and that the number of persons recorded as married has dropped from 212 to 176.

Speaking of the new book reminds me—I owe an apology to a flock of duPonts who have appeared in the register before. If you remember, I stated blandly so far as I could discover Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., (Ethel duPont) was the first of that famous family to appear in the Washington book. Trouble was, my research wasn't thorough enough, and my source (a Capital cave-dweller, incidentally) not as accurate as I thought.

Anyway, I have learned since that no less than six duPonts have been socially registered here before. Mrs. Reginald S. Huidekoper, who was born Bessie C. duPont, has appeared in the Washington book for more than 20 years. Other duPonts who have been "in" include the late Senator and Mrs. T. Coleman duPont, Mrs. Francis B. Crowninshield (Louise duPont), the late Henry A. duPont and his son, Henry S. duPont; Mrs. James Andrews (Julia duPont) and Mrs. Willard Saulsbury (May duPont). So that settles it—Ethel duPont Roosevelt is not the first to make the grade in Washington. My mistake.

Senator Guy M. Gillette was entertained at a dinner in the Blue room of the Shoreham last evening by his office staff.

Thomsens Give Cocktail Party For Diplomats

German Embassy Counselor and Wife Hosts to Friends Here.

Just about everything that goes to make a party perfect was in evidence at the home of the Counselor of the German Embassy and Frau Hans Thomsen late yesterday afternoon. Frau Thomsen, one of the most charming of the diplomatic hostesses, wore a frock of black and gold and a gold chain necklace. She had just returned from a trip to New York, where she saw her old friends, the Archduke Franz Josef of Austria and the duchess. This illustrious couple, Frau Thomsen said, had been forced to change hotels in New York because of the crowds of people trying to see them.

Among the guests at the cocktail party were the Count and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg of the Netherlands Legation, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Joyce, the latter in a smart black jacket with white polka dots, the Marchesi di Capomazza, and Frau Scholz looking very beautiful in one of those chic high hats.

Herr Thomsen, who is a very clever amateur photographer, showed two of his guests, Mrs. William Mann and Michael Budny, Attache of the Polish Embassy, some of the pictures he has taken on his travels.

Others who were enjoying the Thomsens' hospitality were Miss Elizabeth Roberts, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Miss Willa McGee, Anthony de Balasy, Baron Paul Shell, Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicious, the latter in a becoming black dress embroidered in colored beads, and Miss Stellita Stapleton. From the British Embassy were Benjamin Plunkett and Philip Broadmead, and from the Swedish Legation Carl Wastfelt, who was chatting with Mrs. Sims Snow and Ostermann von Roth, Secretary of the German Embassy.

A new arrival in Washington, Mme. de Kuhnelt-Leddihn was there with her husband who has been teaching at the Georgetown University. M. de Kuhnelt-Leddihn expressed the belief that the most important education of adults was the education they received from their children.

Attractive Trio of Washingtonians

Harris & Ewing.

Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, with her children, Mildred and William 2d. The Douglases have recently been joined by Mrs. Douglas' mother, Mrs. C. M. Riddle, of La Grande, Oreg., who will remain with them through the winter.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

WHEN HUGH WILSON departs for Berlin as Ambasador, and if Joseph Kennedy takes over the same post in London, there will be much weeping and wailing among members of Washington society. For one thing, they will miss the informal parties given by Mr. Kennedy at Marwood, his estate near Great Falls. Although one of the hardest working executives in the Government, Mr. Kennedy occasionally finds time to entertain his friends in this lavish mansion, which was built by a millionaire, now deceased, for his wife, a former chorus girl. She was responsible for the bathroom, as big as an ordinary drawing room, with its sunken bath and solid gold fixtures. Downstairs is a theater seating several hundred, where Mr. Kennedy showed movies in the winter—during the summer they are displayed outside on the terrace.

DUDLEY HARMON.

Most of the time Mr. Kennedy and a secretary occupy Marwood in solitary glory, as the chairman's family prefers to remain in New York or their home on Cape Cod. More than one party at Marwood has ended with an amused secretary conducting the guests around on a tour of the house which always reaches its climax in the glorious bathroom.

Assistant Secretary of State Wilson and Mrs. Wilson—"Kate" to her friends—entertain as frequently as most high-up members of the diplomatic set. Only a few months ago they had finally settled in their residence on Woodland drive, leased to others during their long stay in Geneva and other posts. Mrs. Wilson has snow-white hair, a youthful face and talents as a hostess.

* * * *

ANYTHING AS MODERN as a cocktail party always seems a slight anachronism when given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis deWolfe. Their house on O street in Georgetown is one of the oldest in Washington, and was formerly the Russian legation when Baron Bodisco was the czar's minister. A massive yellow brick edifice, it is always written up in Capital guide books, whose authors do not know that Mrs. deWolfe converted it from a tenement state into which it had fallen in later years.

The house is filled with many beautiful antiques which come from Mr. deWolfe's family home in Bristol, R. I. In the drawing room, which has a beautifully carved fireplace, are many fine examples of French furniture. Downstairs, off the dining room, is a smaller game room, where the chairs are among the most comfortable in Washington.

Sister to Attend Emily Cramer

Miss Emily Durham Cramer, who will be married the evening of December 18 to Charles Earle Van Sickle, of Manila, will have as her only attendant her sister, Miss Mary Cramer. C. N. King, of Chicago, will be best man, and the ushers are Dean Conrad and John Littig, of Manila, and Addison Gardner Foster 2d and Lieut. Thomas Sherburne, of Washington.

The ceremony will take place at the Western Presbyterian Church and will be followed by a reception at the Army and Navy Country Club. Miss Cramer is the daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Myron Cramer.

* * * *

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Jack R. Beam were hosts at a dinner party in the Blue Room of the Shoreham last evening in honor of Champ Davis, of Wilmington, N. C., and Fitzgerald Hull, of Nashville, Tenn.

Others in the company included Maj. and Mrs. Leland A. Miller, Col. and Mrs. Leslie MacDill, Dr. and Mrs. Veador Leonard, of Baltimore, and Mr. and Mrs. M. Wilson Offutt and their house guest, Mrs. J. L. Cooper.

Mandate Body To Be Guests at Luncheon Here

Secretary and Mrs. Hull and Envoy of Peru Will Attend Function.

Among those who will greet the returned members of the Flying Caravan of the Peoples Mandate Committee at the luncheon tomorrow at 1 o'clock at the Carlton Hotel are the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull and the Ambassador of Peru, Manuel de Freyre y Santander. Both Secretary Hull and the Peruvian Ambassador will make speeches. Representative Caroline O'Day, vice chairman of the Mandate Committee, will preside.

The four members of the Caravan who have just completed a 17,000-mile air tour to South and Central America in the interests of ratification of the Buenos Aires peace treaties, Mrs. Burton W. Musser, Mrs. Enoch Wesley Frost, Senora Ana del Pulgar de Burke and Mrs. Rebecca Hourwich Reyher, will be honored guests.

Many members of the diplomatic set will be present and include, the Ambassador of Argentina and Senora de Espil; the Ambassador of Chile, Manuel Trucco; the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Najera; the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos; the Minister of Uraguay, J. Richling; the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro; the Minister of Colombia, Miguel Lopez Pumarejo; the Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza; the Minister of Costa Rica and Senora de Castro Beeche, and the Minister of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante.

Also the Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles; the Director General of the Pan American Union, Dr. Leo A. Rowe, and many others.

Former Envoy To Turkey Here

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. A. MacMurray Return From Foreign Posts.

THE FORMER United States Ambassador to Turkey, J. V. A. MacMurray and Mrs. MacMurray have returned to Washington and are at the Shoreham. They have spent the last five months in the Philippine Islands, where Mr. MacMurray was head of the joint preparatory committee assigned to the islands. They are accompanied by their daughter, Miss Lois V. A. MacMurray, who expects to enter school in the Capital.

Mr. MacMurray is considered an authority on Japanese-Chinese affairs, having written a two-volume book on treaties and agreements with and concerning China. He was observer for the United States Government at Chinese-Japanese negotiations for settlement of the Shantung question in 1921 and 1922, and was Minister to China from 1925 to 1929.

He was Ambassador to Turkey from January, 1936, until his recent diplomatic assignment in the Philippines.

Mrs. Paul H. Maloney Bridge Hostess Today

Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, who, with Representative Maloney, is making her home at the Wardman Park Hotel this season, will entertain at a bridge luncheon today at the Congressional Country Club.

The honor guest will be Miss Edna Faust, of New Orleans, who is visiting her sister, Mrs. Arthur H. Mayo.

Eunice Miller Chooses Maid

Completing arrangements for her marriage on December 31, Miss Eunice Miller, who will become the bride of Wayne Philip Ellis, jr., at a ceremony to take place at the Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority House on the campus of the University of Maryland, has chosen her sister, Miss Betty Charlotte Miller, for her maid of honor. Her bridesmaids will be Miss Jean Miller, Miss Susanne Dehirst Miller, Miss Berenice Ellis and Miss Muriel James.

Navy Men Will Hear From C.A.R.

Will Visit Craft Which Commemorate Heroes of Revolution.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Boys and girls of the C. A. R. throughout the Nation will soon be writing letters to the officers and men aboard ships in the United States Navy named for heroes and events of the American Revolution. This new plan of arousing interest in history, past and present, was announced yesterday by Mrs. William H. Pouch, national president of the national society, Children of the American Revolution, at the December meeting of the executive board.

The children will receive information about the ships and will have opportunity to visit them when they are in adjacent ports, through the co-operation of the Navy Department.

The meeting yesterday was held in the C. A. R. room of Memorial Continental Hall, which had been closed temporarily for redecoration. It now has all the State flags in array against the colonial background of the walls, and the handsome colonial furnishings.

Pennsylvania Plans State Convention

Mrs. Harvey Spannuth, State director of Pennsylvania, was here for the session and announced the society in her State would have a convention next June in the historic log house at Bethlehem, which is owned by the C.A.R. Miss Marie L. Beyerle, of Reading, a national vice-president, also was among the board members present.

Mrs. Pouch, who has just returned from a month's trip of inspection to chapters, announced an increase of 157 in membership, and an active interest everywhere in the organization.

Other national officers at yesterday's meeting were Mrs. James Henry Harper, State director for the District of Columbia; Mrs. John Lester Barr, recording secretary; Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, organizing secretary; Mrs. Percy M. Bailey, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Thaddeus M. Jones, treasurer; Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant, registrar; Mrs. Lee R. Pennington, jr., historian, and Mrs. Charles S. Groves, librarian-curator.

D. A. R. Juniors Have Novel Entertainment

Mrs. Pouch, following the all-day meeting of the C. A. R., last night addressed the Juniors of Mary Washington Chapter of the D. A. R. at their "loop-and-whorl" party at the home of Mrs. Russell Harrison, in the Dresden. This junior group is the first to be organized here and is affiliated with the chapter which was the first in the District, if not the Nation, after the national society was founded.

The juniors have as members three great-ganddaughters of President Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Harrison, who was the first president general of the D. A. R. They are Miss Mary Virginia Williams, who was named chairman of the group; Miss Marthena Williams and Miss Survilla Williams, daughters of Mrs. Harrison Williams. Others in the group include Mrs. Thomas Egan, vice chairman; Miss Roba Luncille Lynch, recording secretary; Mrs. C. W. Knerr, treasurer; Miss Josephine Jecko, chairman of membership; Miss Margaret Sampson, Miss Elizabeth Pierce, Miss Dorothy Warrington, Miss Elizabeth Milliken, Miss Adeline Thornton, Miss Lucille Appleby, Miss Margaret Lynch, Miss Eleanor Davis, Mrs. Nathan Poole and Miss Katherine Hadley.

The major feature last night was a fingerprint demonstration by Christopher C. Bennett, expert from the Adjutant General's Office, Identity Section of the War Department. With ink and classification cards, he recorded the types of fingers and thumbs at the party. The fingerprints were presented to the members as a Christmas gift from Mr. Bennett and his wife, Dr. Josephine Baird-Bennett, registrar of the Mary Washington Chapter.

Guests at the party, in addition to Mrs. Pouch, were Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, State regent, and Mrs. Sterling Bockoven, director of publicity for the District of Columbia D. A. R.

REPRESENTATIVE RALPH O. BREWSTER and Mrs. Brewster will entertain at a small tea tomorrow at the new clubhouse of the League of Republican Women, the first affair given there by a member of the Congressional delegation since it was opened in the late summer. The tea is at 4 o'clock, in honor of Mayor Harry Burton, of Cleveland—and thereby hangs a tale. Mayor Burton, who just has been re-elected to serve his second term and who, rumor has it, is being groomed to be the next Governor of Ohio, was a schoolmate of Representative Brewster's both at Bowdoin College and Harvard Law School. Their careers have run parallel from school days on.

Both were members of the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, were graduated with honors from Bowdoin and made Phi Beta Kappa, and both have served with distinction in their respective states, winning elections on the Republican ticket in the midst of Democratic victories elsewhere.

When Mayor Burton was married, Mr. Brewster and his bride-to-be, then Miss Dorothy Foss, were in the wedding party.—Mrs. Burton, who was active this fall in her husband's campaign, did not accompany him to Washington on this trip as he came primarily for the Gridiron dinner.

But, the story of Representative Brewster and Mayor Burton does not end with their careers. Their sons, William Burton and Charles Foss Brewster, are following in their footsteps. They occupied the same room their fathers had in the old Delta Kappa Epsilon house at Bowdoin; both were graduated last spring with honors, made Phi Beta Kappa and are now attending Harvard Law School together—all they have to do now is to become Governors of their States and come to Congress to follow the rest o' the way in the paths their fathers have blazed.

Tales of the Redskins Alarm Chicago.

By Shirley Povich.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Chicago, it seems, has heard tell of the Washington Redskins, couriers have brought fancy tales of that 49-14 affair at New York last Sunday wherein Sammy Baugh passed the Giants dizzy and Cliff Battles ran 'em bow-legged and with their retelling the stories of the Redskins have taken on even wilder portent. Chicago wants to look at this Washington football team.

POVICH.

The good burghers of the city know the Redskins now as the team that scored seven times against a team of Giants that held their Bears to a 3-3 tie. An eleven-horned monster that breathes fire, brimstone and touchdowns—that is Chicago folks' new conception of the Redskins. An eleven-man riot in cleats.

The Redskins' presence in Chicago is something akin to a general alarm. Typical of the panicky stories heard among Windy City citizens is the one they are telling here about the stabbing effects of Sammy Baugh's forward passing.

As the story goes Baugh was taken in hand by Coach Ray Flaherty, of the Redskins, at the start of the season. And was warned that his reputation in college didn't count—that he had yet to make good in professional football.

"It's different in this league, Baugh," said Flaherty. "We do things a lot differently in the pro league. Fr instance, on forward passes. The receivers don't want to bend for passes, and they don't like 'em too high. They like 'em right around the eye."

Asked Baugh: "Which eye, coach?"

Battles Not Human.

As for Battles, well, off that New York performance, the suspicion here is that Cliff has no human traits whatsoever. When he hits the line, he's a buzz-saw on legs. When he goes around the ends, he's supposed to take wings. And in a broken field, he's an eel afflicted with St. Vitus in the hips and feet. Honest, that's what they think here.

Sure, the Bears have Nagurski, and Manders, and Francis, and Feathers, but, sadly shaking their heads, Chicago folks contemplate all too painfully that those guys are only human.

Speaking of Baugh, Coach Flaherty confesses that you could have knocked him over with a bird seed when he realized that the Redskins last fall had won Baugh on the professional league's draft list. "I didn't have any idea we'd land him. Six other clubs had choices of the college crop before it was the Redskins' turn," related Flaherty. "I'd have bet they all would put in for Baugh. First choice went to Cleveland, I think. They took Drake, of Purdue. Philadelphia had second choice, and they took Sam Francis, from Nebraska.

"By the time three or four clubs passed Baugh up I began to hope, but I still didn't think it was possible. Then five clubs passed Baugh up. Then they asked Steve Owen, of the Giants, what player he wanted. He said, Widseth, of Minnesota.

"Then it was my turn to pick. With Baugh not yet drafted, I thought I was dreaming. Any way the league president said, 'Flaherty, who is the Redskins' Choice?' Well, by gawd, I think I bellowed Baugh! so loud that it must have been heard downtown, and we had him. And what a guy he has turned out to be."

Fifth for Flaherty.

No Johnny-come-lately to this championship playoff business in the National League is the Redskins' coach. Since 1933, when the East-West playoff for the title was introduced, four playoffs have been held (Sunday's is the fifth), and Flaherty has been in every one of them, either as a player or a coach.

He was an end for the Giants in that thriller that the Bears won, 23 to 21, when the lead changed hands seven times, and he was at end for the Giants in 1934 when the Giants beat the Bears for the title, 30 to 13. The following year he was still with the Giants when they lost in the playoff, and in 1936 he led his team—the Boston Redskins—into the playoff against the Bears, tak-

Successor To Veteran Is Unknown

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 9 (AP).—The University of Michigan, one of football's strongholds since the turn of the century, was in the market for a new coach tonight.

Harry G. Kipke, one-time all-American pupil of Fielding H. Yost, was notified today by the university board in control of athletics that his contract would not be renewed when it expires on June 1, 1938.

Kipke served as head coach at Michigan for nine years during which his teams won 46 games, lost 25, and tied four. In the last four years, his elevens have been unable to hit winning strides.

The board gave no indication as to Kipke's successor, merely announcing a committee had been selected to interview "qualified coaches" who might apply for the job.

Kipke Surprised.

Kipke said the announcement was a distinct shock and that he had not made any plans for the future. He intimated he would consider several offers he had received to enter business.

"I was looking forward to a splendid season next year," he said, "with the help of the good freshman material we had last fall."

Dismissal of Kipke, who is president of the American Football Coaches Association, marks the only change in the Western Conference coaching line-up since the 1937 gridiron season ended.

Failure of recent Michigan elevens to cope with Minnesota and Ohio State successfully aroused alumni dissatisfaction. In the last five years Minnesota ran up 139 points while holding Michigan to only 6.

Yipke was a football, basketball and baseball star at Michigan in his playing days. He captained the 1923 football team. He served as assistant coach at the University of Missouri and at Michigan, and as head coach at Michigan State College before taking over the coaching reins here from Elton E. (Tad) Wieman in 1929.

Wins Two Titles.

After an average season in 1929, in which his team won five and lost three, Kipke embarked on a winning streak that lasted until 1934. Michigan tied for the conference title in 1930 and 1931, and captured it outright the next two years.

Prior to the 1937 season, Kipke said his team should win four games. One point victories over Iowa, Illinois and Chicago and a one-touchdown win over Pennsylvania fulfilled his prediction.

Because of the .500 record, it had been felt in many quarters that Kipke would keep his job for at least another year.

Rumors as to the identity of Kipke's successor swept the Michigan campus immediately after the dismissal announcement.

Prominently mentioned were Irwin Uteritz, former Michigan quarterback, now backfield coach at University of California, and Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, coach at University of Detroit.

Budge Treated For Shoulder Hurt in Match

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 9 (AP). Donald Budge, Oakland, Calif., redhead, who gained the finals of the Victorian tennis championships today with an 8—6, 6—3, 8—6 victory over Vivian McGrath, of Australia, underwent medical treatment for a sore shoulder after the match.

Budge, United States and Wimbledon champion, believes that the muscular ailment which hampered his service all week is the result of an injury to the three top ribs on his right side suffered in an automobile accident shortly before he left the United States.

In Saturday's match the American ace will meet young Jack Bromwich, who defeated his fellow Australian, Adrian Quist, 6—3, 4—6, 6—3, 3—6, 6—1, in today's other semifinal.

War Admiral Voted Best In America

By Orlo Robertson.
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 9.—To War Admiral, unbeaten 3-year old, and Seabiscuit, king of the handicap division, today went the highest awards attainable on the American turf.

War Admiral, winner of eight straight races for Samuel Riddle, of Philadelphia, was voted the outstanding horse of the year in the Turf and Sport Digest's poll of 256 sports writers, while Seabiscuit, representing Mrs. C. S. Howard, of San Francisco, was awarded the same honor by 25 of the country's leading horsemen acting for the magazine, Horse and Horseman.

In both contests, the race was as close as they staged for money-winning honors this year. The Admiral, winner of $166,500, outpointed his older West Coast rival, 621 to 603, in the Turf and Sport Digest poll. Seabiscuit, which earned $168,642.50 in winning eleven of his 14 starts and finishing in the money in the other three, nosed out the Admiral in the magazine's consensus.

Riddle's ace never left the issue in doubt as to the best 3-year-old. He was the choice of every writer and accumulated 768 points to 311 by T. P. Morgan's Texas-owned Heelfly. Each writer listed three horses according to preference and the voting was based on three points for first, two for second and one for third.

Although Turf and Sport Digest made no provision for naming the champion handicap performer, it was decided to award a special plaque to Seabiscuit's owner because of the colt's fine showing in both the voting and competition. Seabiscuit's reward for winning the Horse and Horseman award will be a gold bridle.

The Horse and Horseman did not limit its consideration to thoroughbreds. E. J. Baker's Greyhound, of St. Charles, Ill., which lowered the world trotting mark to 1:56, came in for strong consideration. He was the choice of such well-known sportsmen as Algernon Daingerfield, assistant secretary of the Jockey Club, and Harry T. Peters, joint master of the famous Meadow Brook Hunt.

Other horses considered were C. V. Whitney's Fuss Budget outstanding polo pony of 1937; G. D. Widener's High Fleet, most consistent racing mare; Man o' War, sire and grand sire of War Admiral and Seabiscuit, respectively; Mrs. John Hay Whitney's The Grey Knight, leading hunter at the major horse shows, and John Hay Whitney's The Porter, ranking sire of the year.

Other awards in the Turf and Sport Digest poll went to Hal Price Headley's Menow and Mrs. Edward Friendly's Jacola. Menow, winner of the Belmont Futurity and leading money-winning juvenile, with $6,825, won 2-year-old honors by a margin of 556 to 330 over W. S. Kilmer's Nedayr, a late season sensation and victor in the Pimlico Futurity.

Jacola was judged the best of the 2-year-old fillies after a close contest with the Wheatley Stable's consistent Merry Lassie.

'Red' Faber Signs As an Instructor

Chicago, Dec. 9 (AP).—Urban (Red) Faber, last of baseball's great spitball pitchers and for 20 years a major league star, said tonight he has signed a contract to instruct young players in the school Ray L. Doan will conduct at Hot Springs, Ark. It will be Faber's first return to the game since the fall of 1933, when he blanked the Chicago Cubs 2-0 in a city series tilt with the White Sox.

Wrigley Field Thawed Out for Redskins Game

To insure proper playing conditions for the championship game between the Chicago Bears and Washington Redskins Sunday, workmen are spraying gasoline on the field and setting it afire to melt the surface ice and soften the frozen sod. Hot blasts from an asphalt heater also are being used.

Frank Named On Collier's All-America

Yale Star, Chapman, White Are Only Unanimous Choices.

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Clint Frank, of Yale; Sam Chapman, of California, and Byron (Whizzer) White, of Colorado, backfield trio, were the only unanimous choices for the all-American football eleven picked this year by Collier's Magazine.

No college had more than one representative on the team, which follows:

Ends, Andrew Bershak, North Carolina, and Jerome Holland, Cornell.

Guards, Leroy Monsky, Alabama, and Joseph Routi, Texas A. and M.

Center, Carl C. Hinkle, jr., Vanderbilt.

Quarterback, Clinton E. Frank, Yale.

Halfbacks, Marshall Goldberg, Pittsburgh, and Byron White, Colorado.

Fullback, Samuel Chapman, California.

Ace Parker Out With Hurt Ankle

Portsmouth, Va., Dec. 9 (AP).—An injured ankle, sustained in Sunday's game here with Norfolk Clancys will prevent Ace Parker, Virginia's nationally famous football star, from playing in a game with the Portsmouth Cubs at Richmond Sunday against the Arrows.

Parker at first did not believe the injury was serious and told Wolga Bland, owner of the Cubs, that he would be able to play in Richmond Sunday. Last night, however, the ankle began to swell, Parker said. Rather than risk serious injury Parker notified Bland that he would not be able to play Sunday.

Redskins Plan 'Sneak'

Washingtonians Carry Along Tennis Shoes to Foil Jack Frost; $93,000 Gate Seen for Title Battle.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Washington's Redskins came to Chicago prepared for Bronko Nagurski, the Bears in general, and Jack Frost.

In the Redskin trunks repose 24 pairs of tennis shoes that will be hauled out and laced to the Washington athletes' feet if Chicago's freezing temperature should coat Wrigley Field with ice or frost Sunday in the championship game.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty, who knows the futility of regulation cleats on ice, added the tennis shoes to the Redskins' equipment immediate after the Washington team swamped the Giants and qualified for the East-West play-off. The rubber-soled shoes will insure a far better footing.

• • • •

Wrigley Field, if filled to the capacity of 42,000 on Sunday, will provide a total gate of $93,000.

Fifty per cent of the receipts, after the Government tax and game expenses are deducted, will go into the players' pool. Each player on the winning team will earn, roughly, $700. Each losing player is expected to receive approximately $450.

Of the remaining 50 per cent, 10 per cent will go to the players on the second-place clubs in each division; 15 per cent will go to the owner of each contending club and 10 per cent will go to the league treasury.

• • • •

Fullback Don Irwin and Center Ed Kawal, injured Redskins, who did not see action against the Giants last Sunday, are now available for duty, Trainer Roy Baker announced.

• • • •

At center for the Bears will be Pete Bausch, Redskin star of last year, who was traded for Kawal. Bausch, rated the second best center in the league, was traded by the Redskins as the outgrowth of a dispute with Owner George Marshall.

• • • •

For a half-dozen Redskins, Sunday's battle means a return to the scene of former triumphs. Sammy Baugh, Riley, Wayne Milner, Jim Karcher and Ed Michaels all performed in Chicago as members of college all-star teams against the pro champions. Kawal for several years was the regular center of the Bears.

• • • •

When Dan Fortmann, ace Chicago guard, tackles Don Irwin on one of the latter's line plunges, as Fortmann is expected to do frequently, he will be tackling an old teammate. Fortmann and Irwin were stars for Coach Andy Kerr at Colgate two years ago.

• • • •

The Redskins, who last week knocked off the best defensive team in the pro league, will have to do it all over again Sunday. Because the Redskins ruined the Giants' defensive record, the Bears are now the leading defensive team in the league.

Leemans Returns To Join Brewers' Basketball Five

Tuffy Leemans, who played a little football with George Washington University several years ago and now is a member of the New York Giants, of the National Professional Football League, is in town to take up his basketball duties where he left off last winter.

It's the Heurich Brewers Professionals that Tuffy, nee Alphonse, is hoping to play with. He arrived in town yesterday and reported for practice last night at the team's Twenty-sixth and D streets gymnasium. Ten others comprise the squad preparing for the first game, Sunday, against the New York Yankees.

Although Tuffy was a well established member last year, the presence of several newcomers has made him a dubious starter. With such players as Milton Shoenfeld and Ben Goldfadden, former G. W. teammates; Pete Neun, Everett Russell, Ralph Benny, Otts Zahn and Bucky Buscher on the squad, Tuffy faces no easy job in winning a starting berth.

Frigid Blasts Greet Squad on Arrival in Chicago; Betting Even Flaherty Fears Foe Is Underrated After Hearing Scout Reports; Blackboard Drill Emphasizes Buivid's Passing Ability.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—To Chicago's subfreezing temperature today the Redskins came, thawed and were conquered with a desire to stay indoors.

Texas Sammy Baugh, seeing snow for the second time in his life, listened to the howling winds and hugged the hotel radiators. Riley Smith and his four football-playing colleagues from Alabama gazed upon the frigid scene and shivered from suggestion. Head Coach Ray Flaherty, an understanding fellow, understood.

So it was that the Redskins' coach called off the practice session scheduled for frozen Wrigley Field and shooed his squad of Washington athletes into the vast 124th Regiment Armory, on Chicago's South Side, for a two-hour workout.

There in the spacious, steam-heated surroundings the Redskins passed and punted and ran through their plays with an emphasis on defense.

It's all leading up, you know, to Sunday's battle between the Redskins and the Bears for the National League championship. It's Washington vs. Chicago in the East-West play-off and here today it was even money and take your choice, despite Eastern odds that favored the Redskins.

Ten minutes after the Redskins piled out of their trains and into the swank Edgewater Beach Hotel, Coach Flaherty went into session with his scouts, checked out the Bears' plays and justified all his fears.

"I only hope we have a lot of luck Sunday," he said.

There was little encouraging that Flaherty learned from his scouting corps. Bronko Nagurski, Jack Manders, Masterson and Ray Nolting would be in the Bears' starting backfield, he was advised. Then Flaherty shuddered at the thought of such as Beattie Feathers, Ray Buivid, Gene Ronzani and Keith Molesworth sitting on the Chicago bench.

That Bear line will take a lot of pushing around, too, he is convinced. Reading from left to right, starting at tackle, are five Bears who average 218 pounds, including George Musso, left guard, who checks in at 258 pounds.

There was nothing comforting, either, for Flaherty in his scouts' information that if the Redskins did succeed in getting through that Bear line they would then have to contend with Bronko Nagurski, who is the chief backer-up.

That information drove Flaherty to another blackboard drill and chalk talk for the benefit of his Redskin athletes.

Despite the temperature, which showed at 5 degrees when the Redskins de-trained at Chicago, the city is warming up to Sunday's game. Since their 49-14 defeat of the Giants, a team that held the Bears to 3-3, the Redskins have boomed as an attraction here; and if the weather is favorable Sunday, a sell-out is indicated.

That would mean 42,000 fans in the park, 2,000 less than the all-time attendance at Chicago. But the league bosses have ruled that no tickets will be sold to standees for the title game. Advance sales for the Sunday battle are already greater than the sales for the Bears-Packer game that drew 44,000.

But there is no indication that the weather man will relent. Freezing temperature is forecast for the next three days. The opening whistle on Sunday may send the two teams onto a frozen gridiron.

Flaherty's scouts have reported a new Chicago threat. Ray Buivid, a nonentity in the Bears' early successes this season, now has blossomed as a forward passer to be greatly feared. They cite Buivid's six touchdown passes in last Sunday's game against the Cardinals, with Lester McDonald (Nebraska) on the receiving end.

Now add to the Redskins' watchword of "Stop Nagurski! Stop Manders! Stop Nolting and Feathers!" is the new cry of Flaherty, namely, and to wit: "Stop Buivid!"

'Dizzy Dean' Open Set for January 13

Bradenton, Fla., Dec. 9 (AP).—The second annual "Dizzy Dean" Open Golf Tournament will be held at the Bradenton Country Club January 13, President A. J. Lawlor of the club announced today.

Prizes will amount to $500. The tournament was postponed from this week until December 15 and then set for January 13 to avoid conflict with other tournaments, Lawlor said.

V.M.I. Names Grid Coach

H. Russ Cohen Also to Act as Chief Scout.

By the Associated Press.

Waynesboro, Ga., Dec. 9.—Henry Russell (Russ) Cohen, former head football coach at Louisiana State and CCincinnati universities, today accepted a position as an assistant coach and chief scout at Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington.

He will succeed Jack Alexander, former Duke star, who will resign next June. Allison T. S. (Pooley) Hubert, former University of Alabama backfield ace, is head coach at V. M. C.

Cohen, who makes his home here, said he had not coached this season since the middle of October, when he resigned at Cincinnati.

A graduate of Vanderbilt, Cohen served as an assistant on the coaching staffs of Vanderbilt, Alabama and Georgia before going to L. S. U.

Hubert, who, with Line Coach Carney Laslie, End Coach James E. Walker and Freshman Coach Albert Elmore, received reappointment yesterday, tried to get Cohen as an assistant when Hubert first came to V. M. I. last winter.

Patrons Jeer As Jim Beats Bartush Here

Champion Wins Dull Bout Before 2,300 Fans; Miss Burke Wins.

By Bob Garrison.

Of course you won't believe it, but Jim Londos won the feature event on Joe Turner's weekly wrestle show last night at the W Street Arena.

A capacity house of 2,300 persons watched he of the Gorgeous physique make his first appearance in a local ring in more than three years and if his performance against Billy Bartush, his victim in thirty minutes, is any criterion, it may be his last for many years to come. Jeem wasn't so hot.

He failed to match the fast pace set by the preliminary boys—and girls—and before the scrap had reached the halfway mark the spectators were turning their attention to a fellow named Mopheus. It was a slow starting affair that never gathered momentum, and ended so abruptly even Bartush didn't believe it. He lay still in bewilderment, and had to be helped to his feet by Londos and led from the ring.

Jeem No Showman.

Now, there wasn't anything wrong with the "world champion" insofar as his wrestling was concerned. He was beyond reproach in that respect. But he was no showman, and that's what made it a sophorific set-to.

At 37 Londos is still a perfect specimen of manhood, possessor of a youthful body, which is all very nice, but what the cash customers have become accustomed to and demand is the usual maul and mayhem as perpetrated by lesser names. Perhaps that's why they booed Jim when he left the ring. He had won, but who cared?

For 15 minutes, Jim, sporting a shiny cocoa-butter tan, slipped from the eager grip of beer-bellied Bartush and then proceeded to use foul tactics, such as working on nerve centers when referee Benny Bortnick wasn't looking, to wear down his foe's resistance.

These villianous efforts, unbecoming a champion, were the only true touch of present day grappling in the entire episode as the rest of the time elapsed in split-seconds. Jim applied the splits to Bill; then Bill reciprocated, adding a few wild right hand blows to Jim's tummy which took the cake—stomachache—and paved the way to the finis.

Feminine Touch.

He turned in rage, raised his 240-pound opponent above his head and gave him a ride on the merry-go-round. Then as the song has it, it broke down, and Bartush was pinned beneath a body press.

Two dainty young ladies, Mildred Burke, mid-Western lightweight champion, and Clara Devoe, added a feminine touch in the semiwindup. Miss Burke pinned her curly-haired brunette foe in 9 minutes with a crotch hold and body press.

In other bouts, Billy Hanson threw Franz Schuman of Germany (he even had a Hitler mustache), in 11½ minutes with a body slam, head knock, and body press; Al Pereira won from Abe Kasney in 20½ minutes with a series of body slams, and Paddy Mack tossed John Bozman, sub for Henry Kalkovich, in 19 minutes with a combination leg scissors and body slam.

Simon's Rolls Set Of 419 for Mark

Irwin Simon, anchor man for Kann's bowling team, rolled a new season record in the Department Store League last night at Recreation Alleys by rolling games of 155, 134 and 130 for a 419 set. Aided by Simon's big set and Sproul's 371, Kann's took a 2-1 decision from Lansburgh's. Tom Moore, with 359, was high for the losers. Kann's also chalked up a new team mark with a 638 game.

Woodward & Lothrop, paced by Bill Kingsolver's 360, moved into a tie for first place with the Credit Bureau when they whitewashed Lamb Seal & Stencil Co., while Guy-Curran, led by Stanley Beall's 387, took the odd game ffrom the Credit Bureau.

Professional football annals record that 23-to-21 game of 1933 as the most spectacular playoff game, but Flaherty, who was in that one, likes best to recall the Giants-Bears playoff of 1934.

"We'd have been better off with skates that day," relates Flaherty. "There was ice 2 inches thick covering the field, and it was impossible to keep your footing. But we prepared for it. Steve Owens outfitted the Giants with tennis shoes, and we had a big edge on the Bears, who were using regulation cleats.

"The Bears went out and got a 10-to-3 lead on us in the first half, but Owens wasn't worried. He knew we could take 'em in the second half when we put on our tennis shoes. We did, too. Bears were slipping all over the field and we ran 'em dizzy and won the game, 30 to 13."

Flaherty smiled. "Well," he said, "that was part of the strategy. We didn't want to tip off the Bears, so they could send downtown between halves and rush up a supply of tennis shoes. When they saw us trot out there with those sneakers on for the second half, it was too late. They were licked and couldn't do anything about it."

Redskins Will Claim Clint Frank in Draft

Each Pro Grid Owner to Claim 10 Graduating Players; 35 Are Especially Sought; Yale Ace Sought by Marshall.

A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Thirty-five headline-makers among the 1937 crop of college football players have been ear-marked as material for the National Professional Football League.

Each National League club will claim ten graduating players from college ranks at the league draft meeting to be held here tomorrow, but The Post learned tonight the names of 35 who are being especially sought.

They are, by positions:

Backs—Chapman and Meek (California); Isbell (Purdue); Sloan, Benton and Robbins (Arkansas); White (Colorado); Frank (Yale); Hapes (Mississippi); Howell (Nebraska); Hackney (Duke); Popovich (Montana); Grey (Oregon State); Patrick (Pitt); Vanzo and Heap (Northwestern); Karamatic (Gonzaga); and Kilgrow (Alabama).

Ends—Souchak (Pitt); Dohrmann (Nebraska); Vergane (Purdue).

Guards—Routt (Texas A. & M.); Evans and Stockton (California), and Monsky (Alabama).

Centers—Wojciechowicz (Fordham); Herwig (California); Brock (Nebraska); Price (Miss. State), and Hinkle (Vanderbilt).

The Redskins, as Eastern champions, must await the choices of at least eight other clubs in the league, but Coach Ray Flaherty is avidly eyeing a guard, a fullback and a center.

Despite consistent declarations by Clint Frank, star Yale back, that he will not enter professional football, the Redskins will put in a claim for him as the result of developments lately.

Frank was among the spectators at the Redskins-Giants game last Sunday and, after watching the Washington club win, said: "I wouldn't mind playing behind that Redskin line."

Questioned further, he declared he did not make the remark facetiously—that professional football had begun to appeal to him.

Hoyas Go Hoity-Toity; Practice Is Canceled

They're the hoity-toity Hoyas now. At least that's Coach Fred Mesmer's private opinion of his Georgetown basketball team.

Mesmer was a trifle warm under the collar yesterday when obliged to cancel practice because certain members of the team failed to report. It seems that they absented themselves to visit an art gallery.

"An art gallery. Can you imagine that," the midget mentor snorted. "We've got a tough season ahead of us and need all the work we can get and they suddenly decide they need more culture. Last week it was a concert, then a lecture, and now it's art galleries. I don't know what we're coming to."

Dobson Addresses Wilson Gridders

Frank Dobson, Maryland University football, coach, was guest speaker at a footbal banquet held last night for the Woodrow Wilson High School football team. After paying tribute to the ability of Carl Heintel, Wilson mentor, and complimenting the spirit shown by the Presidents, Dobson warned the boys against college subsidization of athletes, saying "it is a grave evil."

Harvey A. Smith, assistant superintendent of the public high schools, was also a speaker on the program, which included entertainment by an orchestra.

Redskins Vote On 26 Shares Of Spoils

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—The Washington Redskins voted tonight to split their East-West championship game spoils into 26 full shares and two fractions of a share.

Every Redskin who has been with the team since the start of the season, 24 in number, was voted a full share. Red Krause, former Brooklyn guard, who played with the Redskins in their last four games, was voted two-thirds of a share. Barney Koretsky, clubhouse boy, was voted one-third of a share.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty and Assistant Coach Ray Baker were voted full shares.

The Redskins, if they win Sunday's game with the Bears, will earn 60 per cent of the players' pool, or approximately $650 each. If they are beaten, they will gain 40 per cent of the players' pool, or approximately $450 each.

Little All-America' Grid Team Such in Name Only—Not Stature

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 9.—The 1937 Associated Press "Little All-America" football team may be little in name, but not in stature.

The team—five players from the combined South and Southwest, three from the Middle West, two from the East and one from the Pacific Coast—averages better than 189 pounds over all. It has a line scaling 195 from end to end, and a backfield that, despite the presence of 160-pound Quarterback Burns McKinney, of Hardin-Simmons, Tex., averages 181 pounds.

That competition among the brilliant 1937 crop of small-college backs was tough is attested to in the fact that the "Little All-America" backfield includes only one repeater, Capt. Dick Riffle, of Albright. Paired with him and McKinney, the two-year undefeated Texans' climax runner and ace passer, are Wendell Butcher, of Gustavus Adolphus (Minn.) and Clay Calhoun, of Loyola of New Orleans.

Calhoun, captain and fullback, was a battering line plunger and blocker, and a defensive standout in every game despite the handicap of weak support. Butcher, also a runner and blocker, was an iron man not just for one season but for three. He played a full 60 minutes in 18 games.

The Minnesotan's Midwestern mates in the all-star array are Harry Kline, 190-pound end from Emporia (Kans.) Teachers, and Wayne Godard, 192-pound tackle of Cape Girardeau's all-winning squad.

The South and Southwest, in addition to McKinney and Calhoun, also contribute a guard, Elmer Cochran, of Murray (Ky.) Teachers; the other tackle, 212-pound Walter Riddle, of Birmingham-Southern, and Center Wallace Johnson, a converted fullback who played for Austin (Tex.) and was tops among linemen in the Texas Conference.

'Little America'

End — Harry Kline, Emporia (Kan.) Teachers, of Elmdale, Kans.
Tackle—Wayne Godard, Cape Girardeau (Mo.), of Anna, Ill.
Center—Wallace Johnson, Austin (Tex.), of Athens, Tex.
Guard—Douglas Oldershaw, Santa Barbara, of Bakersfield, Calif.
Tackle—Walter Riddle, Birmingham-Southern, Wilsonville, Ala.
End—William Smith, Marshall (W. Va.), of Williamson, W. Va.
Quarterback—Burns McKinney, Hardin-Simmons (Tex.), of Wichita Falls, Tex.
Halfback—Richard Riffle, Albright (Pa.), Corning, N. Y.
Fullback—Clay Calhoun, Loyola of the South, of New Orleans.

Prize Money Of $10,000 Lures Stars

Nation's Name Golfers Begin Winter Trek in Miami.

Coral Gables, Fla., Dec. 9.—The winter golfing carousel which carries the Nation's big name players from Florida to California and back to the Carolinas and Georgia starts tomorrow with the playing of the Miami Biltmore $10,000 open.

COOPER.

The keen student of golfing trends is watching the Biltmore open with special interest because the tourney committee ordered observance of the new 14-club rule. This order of the United States Golf Association which does not become law until next January 1, will finally get an actual test after months of locker room discussion. Briefly, the rule says that no player may carry more than 14 clubs. Its purpose was primarily to reduce the loads of nearly 100 pounds on the caddies and to place a greater premium on skillful use of individual clubs rather than putting a dependance upon a wide assortment of clubs of varied loft and distance.

Sentiment as to the worth of the rule was sharply divided tonight. Many of the big-name professionals are on retainers from club manufacturers and they prefer not to discuss the rule although they know their employers don't like it as it will curtail production. Some stars such as Ralph Guldahl, the National Open champion, and Harry Cooper, big money winner from Chicago, are openly opposed to the rule, while others such as Ed Dudley and Bill Melhorn are in favor of it.

If tournaments were won in practice rounds, the 1937 Biltmore champion would be Dick Metz, the courageous youngster from Chicago. Out of competition for months after a serious automobile accident last March, Metz has regained his old form and has been seven strokes under par for the three rounds he has played. He polished off a 67 today after carding a 70 on Tuesday and a 69 on Wednesday. Par is 71. Others whose chances are regarded as bright are Guldahl, the defending champion, and Jimmy Thomson the distance hitter from Pennsylvania. Against Guldahl's chances is the precedent that no Biltmore champion repeats.

Re-elect President.

John A. Remon was reelected president of the President's Cup Regatta Association yesterday at the annual meeting of the Association, held last night, at the Willard Hotel.

Dr. R. Lyman Sexton was elected vice-president, and Robert V. Fleming was elected treasurer. Election of the Board of Directors is scheduled within the next few days. Plans for the 1938 Regatta are already under way.

Archibald Meets Lemieux in Ring Feature at Rialto Tonight

Providence Lad Choice Over Rival

Ultra-Ultra Club's First Card Is Attractive; Green to Fight.

From a ring pitched over the orchestra pit, 10 mucicians of maul will harmonize their blows into a symphony of fistic swing tonight when Maestro Howard Livingston inaugurates weekly fight cards at the Rialto Theater. The first bout is set for 8:30.

Joey Archibald, the Providence, R. I. featherweight, who has never been beaten in a local ring, will attempt to add a fellow named Lemuel (Biff) Lemieux, French-Canadian scrapper, to his string of victims, which at this time includes seven in a row. They are scheduled for the concert's 10-round feature.

Archibald is the amazing youngster who took the Capital by storm this past summer by fighting his way to a fifth ranking among the world's featherweights, scoring six knockouts in his seven local bouts. His last victim, Lou Gevinson, just about established him as tops in this area.

Lemieux, a veteran of eight years, has met Archibald three times previously and proudly produces clippings as a testimontial to his great showing in all instances. These old rivals staged a great battle in Boston a year ago, Lemieux badly shaking up his opponent and being well in the running until Joey outsmarted him to win a decision in the stretch.

The French-Canadian has never been knocked off his feet, but unless his shoes are nailed to the floor he's destined to kiss the canvas if Joey is the same battler he has been in his previous Washington showings.

Joey is currently endeavoring to bring pressure to bear on Henry Armtsrong for a title bout, being nationally ranked as one of the Black Bomber's outstanding challengers.

Seating will be made in the same chairs that have held movie goers for the past few years. Plush-bottomed with ample leg room, the seats are of a variety not to be found any other place in town.

In a semifinal scheduled for eight rounds, "Scrappy Jack" Carter returns to Washington an established main eventer to duel "Irish Eddie" Foran, of Hartford, Conn. Both are colorful boys with fair-to-middling ring records.

With Bill Ackerman

In a recent statement to the press, Secretary Harold L. Ickes said the Izaak Walton League of America in opposing the Government reorganization bill (S2970) is showing itself as a pressure group, and that he did not know who was behind the movement.

There is certainly nothing secretive about who is behind the movement—nature lovers, sportsmen, conservationists—from one end of these United States to the other, who have pledged themselves to the improvement, protection and preservation of America's outdoors.

They believe there is real need for unification of conservation problems—but not by methods which threaten to tear up all the useful work already done—not by methods which set up duplicate governmental services at greater cost to the taxpayer—not by any method which fails to recognize the fact that soils and organic resources, including plants, birds, animals and fish, are all a part of the same conservation scheme. Their objection is based on the assumption that it is impossible to classify woodchucks into "public-land woodchucks" and "private-land woodchucks," and administer each through a different department of Government.

* * * *

The Izaak Walton League objects to any effort to transfer activities of the U. S. Forest Service, Biological Survey or Soil Conservation Service from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of Interior, for every forestry problem is basically a soil problem, as is the welfare of our animal life—any effort to split off these activities from agriculture is simply another form of the political grab that conservationists have fought for 30 years.

The league further objects to renaming the Department of Interior "The Department of Conservation," for no such rebaptism will whitewash the past reputation of the Department of Interior. Unless conservation functions now integrated with the work of other departments are torn loose by the roots, the so-called Conservation Department will be a department in name only—a department without a job—a false front that looks good but has nothing behind it.

The Izaak Walton League objects to the bill as now written because it leaves the safety of American conservation largely up to the whim of the executive branch of Government.

Waltonians are by no means the only objectors to this legislation. Arthur Newton Pack, president American Nature Association says: "Signing one's name to blank checks is no more peanut-witted than accepting what is proposed and implied by the Byrnes bill changing the name of the Department of Interior to the Department of Conservation . . . one supposes that reorganization is proposed to achieve closer-knit direction, efficiency and economy . . . Yet, from what one can gather from the Brownlow plan, a bird, a mammal or a fish in a national forest or park would be the Department of Conservation's worry only until it flew, ran or swam across the line to Bill Jones' ranch. If this be co-ordination, Heaven help the wildlife . . . I believe firmly that any reorganization should be based on the principle of renewable natural resources . . . research as well as administration—in one place regardless of present location. On past performance, I believe that such co-ordination—which certainly is needed—can best be accomplished under a director of conservation within the Department of Agriculture.

President Edward A. O'Neal of the American Farm Bureau Federation says: "For many years our organization has sought to bring about the development of a real policy of land utilization and conservation. In order to accomplish these objectives, we have consistently opposed the removal from the Department of Agriculture of bureaus dealing with these problems and favored the concentration and co-ordination of all conservation activities and land-use functions of our Government in the Department of Agriculture, to avoid duplication and conflicting programs."

* * * *

J. N. (Ding) Darling, president, General Wildlife Federation says: "As chief of the Biological Survey and thereby administrator of wildlife conservation projects, my greatest difficulties were not lack of co-ordination between the government bureaus but refusal to recognize the needs for wildlife conservation by the Administration political chiefs themselves who dictated the policies and controlled the purse strings" . . .

It was the Administration politicos who apportioned hundreds of millions of emergency funds to mosquito drainage projects and told the Biological Survey to go to Congress if it needed money—then held their feet against the doors of both the budget director and Congress . . . The proposed reorganization plan will make wildlife conservation even more subservient to political control by placing the chief of the Biological Survey, and all other bureaus, including Forestry, in the political appointment category. Back of the reorganization bill is a plan to make the Department of Interior into the Department of Conservation under Secretary Ickes. It was Mr. Ickes' Department of Interior which blocked the effort to save the hereditary wildlife ranges on the public domain before the last 170,000,000 acres were turned over permanently to the sheep and cattle grazers for administration. It is Secretary Ickes' department which has administered our public lands and reclamation and has had custody of our mineral and oil deposits. If Mr. Ickes and his Department of Interior have any qualifications as conservationists the records don't show it. The one exception is the National Park Service, which is so powerful it has been burglar-proof but won't remain so long under the reorganization plan."

L. J. Tabor, master National Grange, says: "The proposal is a threat to the unity of rural life and the welfare of agriculture," while James A. McClure, president of the American Forestry Association, says: "Such conservation merely promotes mental confusion. Co-ordination will be hindered instead of helped by destroying the unified work of the Department of Agriculture to build up another department. To divorce the Forest Service from Agriculture would create an inexcusable state of confusion. Changing the label on the Department of the Interior will intensify bureau and department rivalry and lead to disintegration of Federal administration of forest, wild life and other resources that depend upon the soil for sustenance."

Grid Game Sell-Out Is Predicted

Five Patron Boxes Sold; Squads Scrimmage at Central.

A prediction that the charity football game scheduled for December 19 between a local all-star high school and Munroe A. & M., Georgia State champions, will be a sell-out was voiced yesterday by Sidney B. Lust, ticket committee chairman.

The contest which is to be held in Brookland Bowl was arranged as a means of raising money for the hot lunch fund for underprivileged school children and the city's most prominent business leaders have rallied to the cause. Already five patron boxes, valued at $100, have been sold. The purchasers are Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post; John J. Payette, zone manager, Warner Brothers Theaters; A. E. Lichtman, Lichtman Theaters; Morris Cafritz, and Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington Herald and Times.

Student tickets priced at 50 cents each will be placed on sale at the various high schools Monday under the supervision of Sylvan King, in charge of school activities. Other tickets are available at Sidney Lust's Earle Theater Office, Room 620; Archie Engel's, 1416 F street northwest, and National and Capitol theaters.

Uniformed cadets have volunteered as ushers for the All-Star game and a 70-piece band culled from the local high schools also will have a hand in the activities.

Greasy Neale Calls Baugh Greatest Passer

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Major league magnates, ducking further taxes on this year's business, won't pull any more big trades until 1938 . . . There's good basis for suspecting, after all, that Van Lingle Mungo will wind up next year at the Polo Grounds . . .

Speaking of Dodgers, it seems Jess Petty, the old National League southpaw and one-time Brooklynite, had a long visit with his old friend, Ford Frick, during the majors' pow-wow . . . Bumping into a pal who asked him what he had been doing, Petty replied: "Oh, just talking with that newspaperman from New York, Ford Frick. I'm trying to find the National League president now. What did you say his name was?" . . . once a Dodger . . .

Harry Stuhldreher, of Wisconsin, slated to succeed Harry G. Kipke, of Michigan, as president of the American Football Coaches' Association, may have to keep his fingers crossed . . . Seems something always happens to the occupant of this job . . . Ex-Prexy Dana Bible didn't offer any complaint, however, about the shift that moved him from Nebraska to a high-salaried, 10-year job at Texas . . . Bernie Bierman's Minnesotas didn't lose a football game until after he became president of the A. F. C. A. . . . and Bierman's successor, Tuss McLaughry, of Brown, has just survived another scalping party . . .

SAMMY BAUGH.

What's going to happen to Hunk Anderson, Rockne's old top sergeant, who joined the Michigans as line coach this year? . . . Greasy Neale, Yale's master of backfield strategy, rates Sammy Baugh the No. 1 passer of all he's seen, including Benny Friedman, of Michigan; Andy (Swede) Oberlander, of Dartmouth; George Gipp, of Notre Dame; Pete Stinchcomb, of Ohio State, and (surprise) a lad named Whiting, of Marietta (Ohio) College . . . "The tip-off on Baugh is that he can pitch strikes on the run," said Neale.

It seems Carl Snavely, who once tutored North Carolina's footballers, including Andy Bershak, and this year coached Cornell's All-America end, Brud Holland, has been caught in some of the latest cross-fire of all-star argument . . . visiting Carolina friends he was quoted as saying "Bershak is the best end I ever saw in college football" . . . Just to set the record straight, Snavely says: "What I said was exaggerated. I have a high regard for the ability of both boys, but I know Holland is a very much better end than Bershak."

Outgoing and incoming West Point football coaches, Gar Davidson and Bill Wood, will go into their first huddle during coaches' convention at New Orleans . . . Among other worries, Wood will have to adjust himself to enforcement of Army's new three-year varsity rule, involving the loss of at least one star prospect for the 1938 Cadet eleven . . . Tab Robert Smith, rangy halfback and sharpshooting passer of Ouachita (Ark.) College for 1938 little All-America honors . . . Only reason Smith didn't complete all 13 passes he pitched in one game (against Louisiana College) was that receiver fumbled a pair.

FALERMIAN forged to front going to first turn, shook off SWEET LACRUSE without effort and held sway in front of SEDALIA. The latter was shuffled back soon after break and forced to pull up at first turn. Improved position with rush, but hung in final drive. SWEET LACRUSE was away alertly, but weakened gradually. WISE REVUE saved ground, but could not keep up. HAROLD, JR. was unprepared for break.

MISS ADELINE ran ARGOAN into defeat to gain lead and was not seriously threatened thereafter, but was kept to drive to end. BEAUTIFUL GEAN was forced to work way to leaders on outside and closed with belated rush. GRANDEEM showed a good effort, closing full of run. STAR TURN had early speed. ARGOAN finished lame. SCOTTY DON was pulled up when far back and did not appear to be in shape.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $168.60.

FOURTH RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:18½. Off 3:21½. Winner, John Bosley, Jr.'s. ch. g. WINDSOR'S HOPE, forwardly placed from start, improved position gradually, took lead approaching stretch and was kept to pressure to end. WELSH LAD, away in close quarters, went to leaders with bold rush and closed with good courage. PORTAM pressed the early pace of BOULDER DAM and fought it out willingly. SUN SWEEP, away poorly, saved ground, but lacked racing room on inside in final sixteenth. FLAMINO BELLE was not prominent at any stage.

FIFTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:46½. Off 3:50. Winner, Mrs. J. Myers' blk. g. HAPPY HOST broke poorly, was rushed up on inside to get to leaders and showed good effort. BRILLIANT STONE was held safe throughout. SMALL CHANGE lacked speed throughout.

LADY'S FAVOR had early speed.

Charles Town Race Track, Dec. 9.

Fredrick, 8-year-old gelding, marched postward here today with bandages on his four ailing legs and then ran off with the decision in the best race on today's card of the Charles Town Jockey Club. The son of The Porter and Slow and Easy stepped the 4½ furlongs in .49 2-5, only two-fifths of a second over the track record held by Irene's Bob.

Owned by Mrs. J. Myers and trained by J. Yancey Christmas, Fredrick finished willingly under the handling of Jockey Freddy Faust, a Washington boy. The veteran had two lengths advantage over Crushed Ice and another length over Happy Host at the pay-off station.

Fredrick was second choice to Brilliant Stone that failed to be prominent at any stage, and rewarded his backers with a $6.20 mutuel. The race was run over a lightning-fast track and before a crowd of 4,500. The weather moderated today and conditions were perfect for the sport. The daily double pay-off reached the "important money" stage when the 1 and 2 combination of Falermian and Miss Adeline paid $168.60.

Due to the fact that the race special was late, the first race was delayed, but that failed to dampen the enthusiasm of a scattered few bettors who played Miss Bones. The daughter of Crossbones, ridden by Sammy Palumbo, won and paid a $105.80 mutuel. Palumbo gave her a great ride and brought her to the wire a half length in advance of Gold Crescent, one that had a neck the better of Una.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Discussion on the race special swung to "ringers" in horse racing and one fan came up with a good suggestion. In addition to the usual registration, which gives a complete description of the horse, this fan suggested that the horses be branded with a serial number and that this number be shown on every entry blank. Of course, there would be sharpsters who would try to tamper with the branded numbers. This could be avoided by barring any horse whose number did not show clearly. It also was suggested that wire muzzles be locked over horses' heads the night before a race and that these could not be removed without breaking a seal. A little far-fetched, but it might be a means of combating sponging. Ralph McBain is making himself popular as custodian of the jockey's room here. After each race he has hot chocolate and hot coffee for the riders. Due to the wreck at Berwyn, Md., the race special was 20 minutes late today. However, track officials delayed the first race so the Washingtonians and Baltimoreans on the train could bet on the opening event. As far as the Benningites were concerned, they would have been just as well off if they had missed the initial race. We got a miserable ride and finished second. Clocker Mike left today for Tropical Park to get a line on the steeds there before we swing the column onto the Florida track.

BILL.

First race—Dixie S. appears to be the day's standout. Relishes the short route and meets only cheap opposition. Moths Wing and Brain Child to take care of the place and show awards.

Second race—San Pietro showed enough early speed at Bowie to be a prominent contender if not the winner in this event. I'm going to string along. Bromide finally gets a chance to run and is sure to be a threat. Stickemup to take down the minor money.

Third race—Miss Epe appears to have a field that she can whip in this event. Needs only her share of the racing luck to take down the purse. Disown had speed in Maryland and is dangerous. Lead Please would be a threat if in action.

Fourth race—Timber Lady was ridden all over the course last out. There will be a change of riders and I expect a different result. Cloudy Weather and Sea Dove to take the others into camp.

Fifth race—Trixie Lass deserves the call in this field. Recent effort was encouraging and she needs only the right handling. Idle Miss has won some races that would make her prominent in this company. Sundrops to gain the show.

Sixth race—Shot and Shell barely tossed off that last. Has the speed and probably will stick it out long enough to beat these. Justa Gal's last was good. Strophe for the show end.

Seventh race—Sea Finn should be the right one in this field. Likes the track and will have a familiar rider in Palumbo. Fife and Lawmaker to do the chief chasing.

Mayfair Pianist Honored With 'National' Week

'Mogul' Returns to Shoreham as Other Night Spots Await Holidays.

By Chanticleer

Next week is to be "Jack Campbell Week" at the Mayfair. Reason is that the personable pianist of the Thirteenth street gathering spot is observing his 135th consecutive week as anchor man for Mayfair entertainment plans. As a matter of fact, the full title is "National Jack Campbell Week." Jimmy Byrd and his aides at least are not pikers when it comes to honoring an old reliable item of entertainment.

Just to make things interesting and to hold up the Mayfair's high standards of good clean fun, Boss Byrd will give a prize to the person guessing nearest the number of songs Jack has sung and played in his more than two years at the Mayfair. The prize will be on display throughout the week.

That fellow Mogul is returning tomorrow to the Shoreham and will astound and astonish the cocktail lounge guests afternoons and evenings for an indefinite period. (Except tomorrow night, only.) Mogul is the chap who reads your mind. They insist out at the Shoreham that he has studied years, that he is absolutely legitimate and skeptics had better not test him unless they want to be embarrassed—privately, of course. Mogul is a real student of mental telepathy and even offers to help solve your problems. Woods and Bray continue on view in the Blue Room.

Sandra Ward has clicked with the patrons at the King Cole Room and has been held over for two more weeks at least. Bill Barry plays her accompaniments and makes music on his own as well . . . Winter Garden Revue sparkles at Bamboo Gardens this week with a Gay Nineties number spotlighted. Other features: Margie Hammond and Russell O'Friel, in ballroom numbers; Ginger Harris and Bill Behney and Dotty Dunn and Roy Sanders, adagio specialists, and Russ Cullen and orchestra for your dancing.

Shashlik, samovars and dancing and singing—or Old Russia, just as you wish. Anyway, the Troika specializes in good food and sketches on the Chauve Souris order with Emil Vladimoff staging the shows and serving as master of ceremonies, and with Mischa Markoff, Dena Larena, Nick Hope, Olik and Orlik, dancers, and music by Sasha Bartnovsky and orchestra . . . Dick Reger and Helen Malcolm top the entertainment at the Ambassador's Hi-Hat Lounge, with the Three M's holding down the spotlight in another corner of this popular rendezvous.

A gentleman was heard to say on the stairs at the Madrillon one night last week: "Absolutely the best dinner I have had in years at that price." He was speaking of the Maid's Night Out dinner—the $1 special Peter Borras provides every Thursday. Johnny Shaw and ork provide plenty of music, and Helen Forrest sings . . . Chicken dinners, Southern style, is the order of things at Boulevard Farms, 'way down there on the Memorial highway, just below Alexandria. Friday night is Big Apple night, with Dick Richards as your host.

'Jack Campbell Week' at Mayfair

Jack Campbell is being honored next week when the Mayfair celebrates his 135th consecutive week as pianist-master of ceremonies. With Beverly Stull and Ray Nelson.

Robbery Suspect Seized in Chimney

An early morning chase across rooftops in the 600 block of D street southeast yesterday ended when police captured their prisoner in a chimney.

Policeman William T. Haden and Henry W. Whitlow saw a colored man filling a suitcase in a haberdashery store at 617 Pennsylvania avenue southeast. They ordered him to surrender, but he fled, Hayden fired at him.

The policeman chased him, while a taxi driver went to the Fifth Precinct Station for reinforcements. They found their man in a smoking chimney, only his head sticking out. At the station house he gave his name as Sam Johnson, 21.

U. S. Leaflet Puts Annual Rat Costs At $2,500,000,000

The United States Public Health Service thinks it has the biggest rat news since the burghers of Hamelin welched on a chap called the Pied Piper some time ago.

Hot off the presses of the Government Printing Office is a 68-page booklet written by B. E. Holsendorf and illustrated by P. W. Clark, both of the P. . . S., which tells how rats cause $2,500,000,000 damage a year in this country and then shows how the pest can be "architected" out of existence.

Officials predicted yesterday that supplement No. 121 will become a best seller (15 cents) among Federal publications. It explains how residences, apartment houses, stores, stables, wharves—practically any structure, whether existing or in the planning stage—may be made invulnerable to "public enemy No. 1 among animal pests."

Big Exchange Firms to Merge On January 1

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Dec. 9.—Edward B. Smith & Co. and Chas. D. Barney & Co. will merge on January 1, according to an announcement made today by Joseph R. Swan and John W. Hanes on behalf of their respective firms. The new firm will be called Smith, Barney & Co.

The merger brings together two of the older firms in New York, both of which originated as investment banking houses in Philadelphia. The new firm will be among the largest underwriting houses in the country. Both houses are members of the New York Stock Exchange.

"The purpose of the merger," according to the joint announcement, "is to make more complete facilities available to the clients of both firms while eliminating the cost of parallel services. The purposes and policies of the two firms have long been similar."

The New York office of Smith, Barney & Co. will be at 14 Wall street. Offices will be maintained in New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Washington, and London, England. The firm will have representation in other important centers.

Edward B. Smith & Co. was founded in Philadelphia in 1892 and has conducted a general investment business since that date with offices in New York, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. In 1934 Joseph R. Swan, then president of the Guaranty Co. of New York, together with a number of the senior officers of that company, became partners of the firm, bringing with them a substantial part of the organization of the Guaranty Co. which, until the banking act of 1933, had been the security affiliated of the Guaranty Trust Company.

Chas. D. Barney & Co. was established in Philadelphia in 1873 and, until 1902, served a clientele largely in that city. In the latter year the firm opened a New York office and became a member of the New York Stock Exchange. It is one of the larger New York Stock Exchange houses and does a substantial underwriting business. Smith, Barney & Co. will have membership in the principal security and commodity exchanges in the United States.

Brokers' Loans Rise $60,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $710,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented an increase of $60,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,059,000,000.

Bituminous Production.

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended December 4 as approximately 8,000,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week in 1936, 10,581,000 tons; in 1935, 8,482,000 tons.

Lendable Cash Off 70 Million

The Federal Reserve Board stayed out of the Government's securities market again last week and permitted the excess reserves, or lendable cash, of banks to decline $70,000,000.

The board reported today that excess reserves dropped to $1,050,000,000, but board sources indicated this figure still provided a comfortable margin out of which banks could meet any credit demands from business.

About five weeks ago the board started buying Government securities to free the money invested in the securities for business lending in the pre-Christmas season when depositors take considerable money out of the banks for shopping. After buying $38,000,000 worth of securities in three weeks, however, the buying stopped two weeks ago.

With the removal of the security-buying prop to the bank reserves, they declined in response to a seasonal increase of $23,000,000 in money in circulation and a $65,000,000 increase in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks.

Standard Gas Output.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Electric output of the public utility operating companies in the Standard Gas & Electric Co. system for the week ended December 4, 1937, totaled 107,288,468 kilowatt-hours, a decrease of 4.2 per cent, compared with the corresponding week last year.

Corn Exports Raise Prices Over Two Cents

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—Big export corn buying that hoisted European takings this season to the largest amount since 1929 helped shoot corn up 2⅛ cents a bushel today.

More than 1,500,000 bushels of corn were estimated to have been sold today for shipment overseas, making the 1937 total thus far surpass 20,000,000 bushels. In striking contrast was the fact that during 1935 and 1936 the United States imported 75,000,000 bushels of corn.

At the close, Chicago corn futures were ¼@1⅝ cents above yesterday's finish; December, 55¾@55⅞; May, 58⅝@58½; July, 59@59⅛. Wheat, 1⅛@1½ down; December, 96¼@96⅝; May, 93¾@93½; July, 87¼@87⅝. Oats unchanged to ¼ off. Rye varying from ⅝ decline to ⅛ gain, and provisions 5 to 12 cents setback.

Copper Price Cut To 10¼ Cents

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—The price of copper was cut ¼ cent to 10¼ cents a pound in the custom smelters' market today. The new price was established by two reductions of ⅛ cent initiated by smaller sellers. They were met immediately by the larger custom smelters.

One of the smaller primary producers was quoting 10½ cents a pound, or ½ cent under the quotation maintained by big producers.

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Directors of Bethlehem Steel Corporation declared a dividend of $1 a common share today, bringing payments for the year to $5. In September and October payments of $1.50 each were made and in June $1 was paid.

Dividends were resumed in December, 1936, with payment of $1.50. The latest payment is to be made December 24 to holders of record December 17.

Rails Ask I.C.C. to Boost Rates Immediately to Avert Failures

Unprecedented Motion Requests Granting of Passenger and Freight Increases Pending Study of Petition.

The official view within the Administration is that the railroads must have more revenue and have it quickly, as indicated by the statement of Jones on leaving the White House on Wednesday after one of his conferences with Mr. Roosevelt, unless some of the carriers are to tumble into bankruptcy. Some are reported to be on the thin edge of receivership now. Moreover, the Administration view is that only prompt action by the Interstate Commerce Commission can help the railroads now.

Administration figures believe that the alarm which the railroads expressed in the petition which they filed with the I. C. C. is fully justified, and they also believe that the carriers, by testimony of leading railroad men during the last two weeks, have established the necessity for the requested rate increases.

The railroads, in their motion laid before the I. C. C. by R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads, applauded the expeditious handling by the commission of the petition for a permanent increase in rates to offset operating costs resulting from increased wages, cost of supplies and other charges. But they held that due to the slump in business the present procedure is too slow to save many railroads from defaulting on fixed charges.

Unprecedented Decline.

"Traffic on the railroads has declined with unprecedented rapidity since the original petition was filed," yesterday's motion contended. "While all the figures are not available as yet for the month of November, sufficient information is at hand to justify the assertion that the results of operation for that month will prove to be very unsatisfactory indeed.

"Many of the important railroads of the country in that month failed to earn their fixed charges. The unemployment situation is growing worse. At the present time, railroads are buying little else than the fuel which they must purchase to operate their trains. The credit situation is certainly not improving."

The motion contended that "there would seem to be no reason in the law" why the commission should not permit the immediate application of the rates pending the determination of issues raised in the petition for a permanent increase in the rate structure. The testimony already offered, according to the motion, "makes more than a prima facie case for the increases proposed."

Conditions Called Critical.

"Indeed," asserted the motion, "this evidence conclusively demonstrates the necessity for the increases and indicates that the rates should be put immediately into effect, in view of the critical conditions that confront movants (the railroads), conditions which will adversely affect the public interest and retard business recovery.

"Such action on the part of the commission will not interfere with the ordinary progress of the case or with putting into effect whatever rate structure the commission finally approves as a result of these proceedings.

"If, however, movants are permitted to put the rates into effect pendente lite, the result will be to permit the carriers to meet their immediate necessities and, in many cases, will serve to prevent bankruptcies which are imminent unless some immediate relief is granted. The state of railroad credit is such as to make borrowing for actual expenses and interest requirements difficult, if not impossible.

"To put the rates into effect as an emergency matter would not prejudice the final conclusion of the commission in any way, nor operate to the permanent and irreparable disadvantage of the shipping public. On the contrary, to deny the carriers immediate relief would work an irreparable injury, beyond the power of the commission by any subsequent order to remedy."

Wilbur LaRoe, jr., chairman of the shippers' cross-examining committee in the rail case, said the railroads' motion was "absurd," asserting he did not believe that with "millions of dollars at stake the commission will prejudge the merits of the issue by deciding the case before the evidence is submitted." He doubted whether the shippers would "even dignify the motion with a reply."

Earlier in the day, however, LaRoe in his capacity as counsel for the Conference of Southern Governors, announced that organization temporarily had abandoned an Interstate Commerce Commission investigation of class freight rates on Southern railroads. The investigation was ordered a year ago by the commission with a view to equalizing freight rates in the South with those in the North. LaRoe has contended that Southern freight rates were about 40 per cent in excess of those in the North.

Financial Condition Studied.

By the Associated Press.

A considerable part of the hearings before the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday on the railroads' plea for rate increases was devoted to an investigation of the financial condition of the carriers.

Fred W. Ecker, vice president of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., testified that "generally speaking we are not investing in railroad bonds." He said that in 1905 the Metropolitan had 28.9 per cent of its investments in rail securities and that this had dropped to 15.6 last year.

Philip A. Benson, Brooklyn banker and president of the Railroad Securities Owners' Association, appearing in behalf of the increase, said that members of the association held $3,500,000,000 of rail securities.

In addition to the financial testimony the I. C. C. heard from a number of businessmen statements that they and groups they represented favored an increase in rates.

C. R. Bottoroff, Louisville, Ky., hardware merchant, presented a Louisville board of trade resolution supporting the increase. He urge the commission to expedite its investigation.

Factor in Turning Trend.

New York, Dec. 9 (AP).—Myron C. Taylor, chairman of United States Steel, told the New York Railroad Club tonight restoration of railroad purchasing power "would be an important factor in turning the trend of business back upon a course of prosperity."

The head of "Big Steel" conveyed his views in a message to the club's annual dinner.

Railroad spending, Taylor said, would constitute a reinvestment of private capital urgently needed, as the carriers' purchases "would give such impetus and employment as would be felt in every market in the country."

A message from Col. Leonard P. Ayres, vice president of the Cleveland Trust Co., said prosperity of the transportation industry was as important to the Nation's well-being as the prosperity of agriculture.

C. M. Chester, chairman of General Foods Corporation, told the club in his message that "more than anything else, our railways should have sympathetic co-operation from all legislative and administrative bodies."

Representatives Burce Barton, of New York, and Clarence F. Lea, of California, also urged more liberal governmental policies toward the railroads.

State Banks Adopt Plan Of Operation

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Of interest to the banking profession is the program calling for minimum standards of operation for all insured banks adopted here this week by the executive committee of the National Association of State Bank Supervisors. These standards may be incorporated later into State laws dealing with bank operations.

The program coincides with suggestions of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation that all insured banks should be operated under the same effective standards. Points set forth in the schedule are: A minimum capital requirement of not less than $25,000; restriction of loans to any one borrower to 10 per cent of a bank's capital and surplus; prohibition against purchase of common stocks, and against loans to any officers, directors or employes; uniform examination practices; adequate tenure of office and salary for bank supervisors and examiners.

Auto Trade Association.

At the monthly meeting of the Washington Automotive Trade Association held this week at Hay-Adams House, J. M. Sanders, vice president and general manager of Hill & Tibbitts, Ford dealers, was unanimously elected president for a term of one year. Other elections were: first vice president, Lee D. Butler; second vice president, Benamin Ourisman; treasurer, L. S. Jullien; secretary, Louis Carl. Oscar Coolican and Whitney Leary were named directors for three-year terms.

American Security & Trust Co.

American Security & Trust Co. celebrated the forty-eighth year of its successful history this week. This large institution began operation at 1419 G street northwest, in 1889, and two years later had progressed so rapidly that it was necessary for it to procure larger quarters at 1405 G street northwest. Continued growth resulted in the erection of its present monumental main banking house at the northwest corner of Fifteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, in 1905. A large addition was made on the Fifteenth street side of the structure, in 1932. The company now operates four branches and its original capital stock of $1,250,000 has been increased, now aggregating $3,400,000. Corcoran Thom is president of the company, succeeding the late Charles J. Bell in 1928.

Life Underwriters.

At its recent special meeting, held at the Hotel Waldorf, in New York City, the board of trustees of the National Association of Life Underwriters voted to approve the action taken previously by the agency practices committee of the Association of Life Agency Officers, refusing to modify the "Agency Practices Agreement."

The action taken by the national association trustees also carried a firm reiteration of intention to stand behind the original agreement, and to continue to promote this project in accordance with objective No. 5, as published for this year's administration. The objective reads: "To continue the effort to secure the adoption and application of the agency practices agreement by all life insurance companies."

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 9.—Volume of bank clearings this week rose sharply from that of the preceding five-day period, but again failed to equal the comparative 1936 total. The drop, however, was shortened from that recorded in the three preceding compilations.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended with Wednesday, December 8, according to Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., amounted to $5,500,637,000, as compared with $6,008,196,000 for the same week of last year, or a decrease of 8.4 per cent. This contrasted with a loss of 25.2 per cent for the similar comparison a week ago.

New York clearings totaled $3,389,573,000 against $3,859,996,000 last year, or a drop of 12.2 per cent. The aggregate for the outside cities at $2,111,064,000 was 1.7 per cent under the $2,148,200,000 for the corresponding 1936 week.

Clearings for the latest period rose $896,56,000 from the total of the week preceding. In the similar comparison for the same weeks of 1936, on the other hand, clearings fell $146,396,000.

Gas Station Firm Seeks to Occupy Marye Home Site

A filling station may replace the site of the former Marye mansion, scene of many gay parties in the '20s.

The landmark on Connecticut avenue at N street, for 32 years home of Mrs. Marie Doyle Marye, widow of the former United States Ambassador to Russia, was torn down last June.

Yesterday the District Commissioners ordered a hearing on an application to build a filling station on the site. The hearing was scheduled for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

Prior to its destruction, the mansion had been unoccupied for several years. Mrs. Marye refused to live in the house because of the filling station across the street.

For the past two months the site has been used as a used-car lot. Recently a filling station approached Mrs. Marye for the property. An application followed but it was opposed by the Connecticut Avenue Business Men's Association.

Methodist Editor Fears U.S. Fascism

Boston, Dec. 9 (U.P.).—Fascism threatens freedom of the press in this country, Dr. Lewis O. Hartman, editor of Zoin's Herald, declared last night at a dinner honoring the 115th birthday anniversary of the Methodist weekly.

"Already here in spirit, fascism will be here in actual working form tomorrow unless truly patriotic Americans who believe in democracy arouse themselves to determined action," Hartman said.

Methodist officials eulogized the life of Elijah Parish Lovejoy, "martyr to the freedom of the press" killed by a mob in Alton, Ill., a century ago because of his editorial stand against slavery.

Bob Burns Says—

Some of these old sayings are pretty one-sided. For instance—now you take the one that says "Competition is the life of trade." This might be true as long as the competition is fair—but . . .

Well, jest look what happened to my Uncle Sanky. He went up to a little town to open a newspaper and he was back home in less than a month—a failure. I asked him what the trouble was and he says, "Well, I thought I had picked a place where I'd have no competition."

And I says "Well, Uncle Sanky, there ain't no other newspaper in that town," and he says "Yes, I knew there wasn't any other newspaper there, but I didn't know the dog-gone town had seven sewin' circles!"
